100 Dwellings In Capital Branded Firetraps

Thousands Risking Lives Each Night, Inspector Indicates At House Inquiry

Thousands of Washington residents risk their lives nightly in "perhaps a hundred or more" firetraps used as dwellings, Col. John W. Oehmann, District building inspector, indicated yesterday in testimony before the police and fire subcommittee of the House District Committee.

His statement was in reply to a question of Representative Bolles (Republican), Wisconsin, as the subcommittee abruptly launched an investigation into the fire which Monday morning swept with explosive speed through the White Court Apartments at 2131 O street northwest. Three lives were lost in the blaze.

A disclosure that the White Court Apartments had been altered to accommodate additional tenants without permission of District authorities brought a statement from Chairman William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, that inspectors had been "negligent" in not reporting the changes.

Had 41 Apartments

Oehmann said that after the fire it was discovered that the building had 41 apartments instead of the 35 specified when the plans were approved and a permit was granted in 1925 for the conversion from a stable.

"Nobody knows when the change was made," the building inspector said.

Oehmann also testified that a roof with steel girders had been placed over an interior court of the apartment house at some time without knowledge of municipal officials, but Calvin G. Lauber, fire marshal, said that the roof is "a disputed question."

Blames Roof

Lauber said that one of his inspecters believed there had been a roof over the court, while another insisted there was not.

Questioned by members of the subcommittee, Oehmann said he believed the roof was responsible for the explosion during the fire. It would never have been allowed, he said, had a building permit been requested.

At the conclusion of the first session of the inquiry, Schulte announced that the owners of the White Court Apartments, H. G. Smithy Co., will be summoned before the subcommittee along with Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter when the probe is resumed later this week.

Ask Protection

As the hearing opened Schulte said that members of the House District Committee had had probably 200 calls since the Monday fire asking that something be done to protect Washington residents against similar fire hazards.

Members of Congress, he revealed, have complained that one of the city's leading hotels is situated so that fire trucks could not get near the buildings in case of fire.

Col. Oehmann, the first witness, was severely cross-examined by the subcommittee as one member after another shot questions at him without waiting for him to answer previous queries.

Both Oehmann and Lauber, who followed him on the stand, said that the fire escape law needs restudying, and Oehmann suggested that the building code be brought up to date as the Commissioners appointed a special committee to study the building code and draw up whatever new legislation is deemed necessary.

The committee comprises Capt. John L. Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Herbert A. Friede,

Census Stumps the Master At 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue

NOW, ABOUT THIS ONE . . .?—President Roosevelt went on record yesterday as answering all questions asked by the census taker, who, in this case, was William L. Austin, director of the census Associated Press Photo

The head of the household at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue was stumped by the census man yesterday and had to send for help.

President Roosevelt told reporters at his press conference that as head of the household, he had to answer questions pertaining to the White House, including number of servants, and the like.

Naturally, he could not supply the answers offhand, so he had to ask Capt. Howard Ker, supervising engineer of the Executive Mansion and the grounds, to furnish him with the necessary information.

Even when these data have been assembled, the census will not be through with the Nation's No. 1 citizen. As "squire of Hyde Park," he will have to answer questions on the agricultural census sheet.

These questions, he said, will be sent to the census supervisor of Duchess County, New York, who will ring the doorbell at the Hyde Park estate when the President goes up there, probably this weekend or early next week.

The President said he intended to make the trip to arrange for his spring Christmas tree planting. He intends to put in about 50,000 trees.

Farm Credit Bill 'Terrifies' Grange Leader

Taber Says Jones Plan Combines Loans, Charity and Relief

Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, yesterday told the House Agriculture Committee that pending farm credit legislation "terrifies" him.

The head of the influential farm organization asserted that the Jones-Wheeler bill is an attempt "to combine relief, charity and a credit system in one agency." Passage of the bill would have "staggering repercussions" on the Nation's entire credit structure, Taber contended.

Debated in Senate

Important modifications in the measure were suggested to the committee by Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell.

In place of a flat 3 per cent interest rate on farm loans, as provided in the bill, Bell proposed a flexible rate based on the cost to the Government of borrowing money. Present interest rates on FCA loans are 3½ and 4 per cent.

Would Remove Politics

Advocates of the Jones bill have assumed the Federal Government can borrow at 2 per cent and lend at 3 per cent, allowing a 1 per cent spread for administration of the farm credit system and a reserve against losses. Bell told the committee the average interest rate on the Federal debt was approximately 2½ per cent last February 29.

He advocated an interest rate "based on the 'cost of money' plus

Felix Morley Named Head Of Haverford

Special Dispatch to The Post

Philadelphia, April 2.—Appointment of Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, as the next president of Haverford College was announced here today following a special meeting of the board of managers of the college. Dr. Morley, who will assume his new duties in September, succeeds President William Wistar Comfort, who is retiring at the end of the academic year after 23 years of service as Haverford's president.

In making public the new appointment, Morris E. Leeds, president of the board of the Leeds and Northrup Co. and president of the Haverford board, issued the following statement:

"The board feels that Haverford is indeed fortunate in finding a man of the background, the breadth of experience, and the ability of Felix Morley. He is giving up a position of large influence in which he has achieved marked success, and is doing so because of his conviction that the Quaker college offers him an even greater opportunity for worthwhile leadership."

Born on Campus

Felix Morley, who has been editor of The Washington Post since December, 1933, is a graduate of Haverford College, class of 1915, and was born on its campus, January 6, 1894. His father, Dr. Frank Morley, was then professor of mathematics at Haverford.

In 1900 Dr. Morley moved to Baltimore, becoming head of the de-

Probers Tell Subcommittee High WPA Official Is 'Venal'

By John B. Oakes.

A confidential report described as showing a high Washington official of the WPA to be "personally venal" was presented yesterday to the House appropriations subcommittee handling relief.

The report and related documents, summarizing an extensive investigation of the WPA carried on since the last regular session of Congress, was also said by The Post's informant to disclose some cases of "inefficiency and dishonesty" on WPA projects in the States.

The Appropriations subcommittee—which acts also as the WPA investigating committee—received the data almost on the eve of hearing the WPA's budget estimates for the year beginning July 1. Scheduled to appear before the subcommittee tomorrow, WPA Administrator Harrington is expected to ask for $975,000,000—contrasted with $1,475,000,000 for the current year.

However, a considerable group of House liberals is determined to try for $1,500,000,000 for the WPA next year (as well as an additional appropriation for the remaining three months of this year) in order to pre-

Air Conflict Revived

By the Associated Press

London, April 2.—War in the air revived briskly today over an area stretching from Scapa Flow to Switzerland and from Britain's east coast to Germany's Sylt air base.

Allied claims of German plane losses exceeded those made by the Nazis, but Berlin countered with assertions that two British warships had been severely damaged by bombs.

British and German air forces stabbed in give and take across the North Sea, the Germans raiding Scapa Flow naval base and attacking a British convoy, while the British bombed patrol boats off Germany's Sylt air base and attacked numerous raiders in the rapid exchange.

Air raid sirens howled when the bombers came over the Orkney Islands at dusk. The all-clear signal was sounded 45 minutes later.

For about five minutes civilians living near Scapa Flow heard heavy antiaircraft fire, then the explosion of bombs.

Raiders Disappear Quickly

British fighter planes went up in pursuit of the raiders, who made off quickly.

(Germany announced radio reports from the bombers showed a number of warships were attacked by heavy bombs; that some were damaged by direct hits, and that one "listed heavily" after the attack. Another was said to be afire.)

The roar from the engines of the attacking planes indicated a large number was engaged in the attack.

Without giving an indication of how extensive was the bombing, the British said one bomb fell on land, and that one German plane was believed to have been shot down.

"Probable" Toll of 6

The skirmishing over the North Sea was paralleled by increased activity above the Western Front during which the Allies claimed a "probable" toll of six Nazi fighters.

While ground action was limited to "fairly numerous artillery ac-

Scant heed will be paid by the Administration to Congressional or other demands that Undersecretary Welles discuss outside the White House his recent tour of belligerent European capitals, or that Ambassador Bullitt be called upon to explain the references to him in the German White Book, according to all indications last night.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, introduced yesterday a resolution demanding that Welles and Bullitt appear before the Foreign Relations Committee, the latter armed with all speeches he has delivered since he took his post as American Ambassador to France.

Bullitt Denied Imputations

On the House side Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, wrote Secretary Hull asking that Bullitt delay his departure by airplane today for Paris in order to explain the White Book references.

By return messenger Hull notified Fish that "it is not felt that the public interest would be served by delaying more or less indefinitely the departure of Ambassador Bullitt as planned," after explaining that "Ambassador Bullitt has been delayed by the illness of his daughter in returning to his post where he is needed."

Hull also pointed out that Bullitt has "succintly and categorically denied any imputations relating to himself as contained in that published matter. The executive department of the Government has accepted that denial without question."

This was a reference to the German White Book quoting alleged dispatches found in the Polish diplomatic files in Warsaw quoting Bullitt as promising American

Pelley Plotted To Seize U. S., Blonde Says

DOROTHY WARING

Dickstein Charges Silver Shirts' Chief With Treason

Agents of the Dies Committee raided two Communist headquarters at Philadelphia yesterday shortly after the committee heard charges that Silver Shirt Leader William Dudley Pelley and Army officers had conspired in 1934 to overthrow the Government.

Evidence seized in the Philadelphia raids was described last night by Chairman Martin Dies, of the committee investigating un-American activities, as the "most amazing" obtained by the committee in two years of investigation.

"The information contained in these records," he said after a hasty examination of a truckload of documents, "proves conclusively that the Communists have a far-reaching and carefully systematized organization well financed and embracing more than the 100,000 members claimed by Earl Browder and others who have testified before us.

Evidence of Spy System

"We have come into possession of the membership lists for the Philadelphia section, dues paid, disbursements, names of persons listed as sympathizers, membership lists of Communist Front organizations and documentary evidence showing the Communists have established a widespread system of espionage.

"There is some material on political activity of the Communists; that is, activity in our elections. The seized records show that in the Philadelphia area alone $125,000 was raised for the Browder defense fund. Browder was convicted recently of violating our country's passport law."

No Arrests Made

Dies said the Philadelphia evidence shows witnesses before his committee "lied" about Communist Party activities. The "Communist situation" is worse in Philadelphia than in other sections of the country, he added, and said the country will be surprised to learn how Communists have reached into labor, industry and other fields for infor-

Badger State Third Term Factions Split, Republican Vote Is Heavy: Dan Hoan Behind in Milwaukee, Labor Party Leaders in Struggle

Election Results

WISCONSIN

President Roosevelt maintained a better than two-to-one lead over Vice President Garner in the Presidential preference vote count.

In the Republican primary, delegates pledged to District Attorney Dewey, of New York, were about two-to-one ahead of those backing Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan.

The Republicans were outvoting the Democrats, about 10 to 9, in contrast with four years ago when Democrats cast the heavier vote in both primary and general elections.

NEW YORK

KANSAS CITY

The end of the Pendergast machine's control of Kansas City came with election of John B. Gage, fusionist, as mayor, and fusionist capture of control of the city council.

MILWAUKEE

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, Socialist, who has headed the Milwaukee city government since 1916, apparently was defeated by Carl F. Zeidler, 32-year-old singer and former assistant city attorney.

Wisconsin Votes For Candidates

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, April 2.—Early returns from the Wisconsin delegate primary indicated tonight that a big majority of Democratic-voting Badger State citizens favor a third term for President Roosevelt.

They expressed themselves directly in the Presidential preference balloting in which the President was opposed by Vice President Garner, whose supporters campaigned on the proposition that a vote for their man would be a declaration against the draft-Roosevelt movement.

Republican Total Larger

The Presidential preference vote in 1,100 of 3,011 precincts:

Roosevelt, 59,236; Garner 25,719.

There was evidence aplenty, however, that a rocky road lies ahead of the Democrats—the Republicans were outvoting them 10 to 9 in giving delegates pledged to District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, an early lead over those committed to vote for the nomination of Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, in the Republican National Convention.

Farley Faction Ahead

The significance of these figures comes in a comparison with the 1936 primary and general election totals. Four years ago, Mr. Roosevelt received a primary vote more than twice as large as the Republican total, and carried the State in November by the same ratio.

Returns from 826 precincts gave the four Dewey delegate-at-large candidates an average vote of 40,-

3 Parties Involved In New York Voting

By the Associated Press

New York, April 2.—Garner forces failed today in their challenge to Roosevelt third-term sentiment in New York's primary election.

Apparently decisive returns late tonight from the only four Congressional districts in which they opposed organization designees indicated that Garner candidates for election as delegates to the Democratic National Convention had been soundly defeated in each case.

The regular designees—Tammany's and those of the allied Democratic organizations—while not formally committed are expected to support a third nomination for President Roosevelt, if he wants it.

Dewey Opponents Lose

At the same time, in the only contested district among the Republicans where opposition to Thomas E. Dewey, Presidential aspirant, was a direct issue, candidates pledged to oppose his nomination were defeated badly.

The district in which the Garner people had concentrated their campaign—the Sixteenth Congressional—showed the Tammany designees, Representative James F. Fay, a 100 per cent New Dealer, and John Eagan leading by more than 2 to 1.

The vote: Fay, 4,799; Eagan, 4,737; Alfred E. Smith, jr., 2,125, and State Senator John McNaboe, 2,141.

Ed Flynn Leads

In the Twenty-third District, organization designees had leads of around 4 to 1; in the Twenty-second (where Ed Flynn, pro-Roosevelt Democratic boss of the Bronx, was one of the candidates for delegate), better than 5 to 1; in the First District about 5 to 1.

At midnight, the outcome of the intra-party fight between right and left for control of the American Labor Party had not been indicated.

The fight in the American Labor Party was for its control, through control of its State committee. It appeared that the outcome would not be known beyond doubt until that committee meets some time after the election and elects its officers—this because certain up-State committee designees are claimed by each faction.

The row involves the followers of Alex Rose, ALP secretary, against those of Morris Watson. Rose has repeatedly declared the opposition to be Communist-led.

Kansas City Vote Gives Pendergast Forces Final Blow

The last vestige of the "Boss" Pendergast machine control of Kansas City appeared last night to have been wiped out, as John B. Gage, Fusionist candidate, was elected mayor over Flavel Robertson, choice of the regular Democratic organization.

It appeared that the Fusionists likewise had won control of the city council. (Additional details on Page 3.)

Gangdom's Superman

N. Y. Seizes Poetical Little Man Who Hoodwinked Murder Ring

By the Associated Press

New York, April 2.—A terrified, poetry-loving little man known only as "Oscar" was held tonight by District Attorney O'Dwyer as the "inventive genius" who hoodwinked Brooklyn's "murder-for-cash" syndicate into believing he possessed a powerful, secret formula for completely destroying automobiles.

O'Dwyer said he expected to obtain from "Oscar" not only information as to who leaders of the ring were, but details of an inner racket by which gangsters and their friends collected automobile insurance on the grounds the cars had been stolen.

A slovenly, unshaven creature, with an ancient tattered overcoat hanging down to his ankles, "Oscar" was secretly arrested last night, after informers had told O'Dwyer of his hangouts.

Terror-stricken, "Oscar" attempted to leap through a window of the prosecutor's office, O'Dwyer said, and finally fainted.

In his pockets, a dog-eared, paper-covered anthology of verse was discovered. Underlined were certain poems, one of them Wordsworth's "ode on intimations of immortality."

Ironically, the second poem heavily underlined was Kipling's "If"—and its lines: "If you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs and blaming it on you——"

"If I'd studied my poetry more I wouldn't be here," Oscar wailed, stubbornly refusing to reveal his last name.

O'Dwyer disclosed that "Oscar" had told leaders of the ring his secret formula would reduce automobiles to "a ball of molten metal."

On that basis, the prosecutor continued, the ring contracted for "Oscar" to dispose of cars used in "rubbing out" recalcitrants, machines which had become too "hot" to handle in normal underworld channels.

Also, said O'Dwyer, it became "Oscar's" duty to dispose of automobiles which had been only slightly damaged in accidents, the gangster-owners deciding they wanted new cars, and putting in claims for the machines as stolen.

"Oscar was paid $50 for each car. He refused to disclose his shop to the gang," O'Dwyer explained. "The car would be left at a predetermined spot, with keys in it, and Oscar would drive it away. If anyone attempted to follow him, he refused to take the car."

Actually, the prosecutor revealed, "Oscar's" only "formula" consisted of four junk yards, to which he sold the automobiles for prices ranging from $5 to $10. In all, said O'Dwyer, "Oscar" disposed of 50 cars.

3d Reorganizing Plan Offered, Roosevelt Is Preparing 4th

Interdepartmental shifts of a controversial character were avoided by President Roosevelt in a third reorganization plan transmitted to Congress yesterday.

The plan is confined, in fact, to consolidations and rearrangements within individual departments designed to increase effectiveness of operation and to effect a saving of about $150,000 a year.

Even if there had been no saving, the President said, he would consider the changes worth while "in view of the increased effectiveness of administration that will result."

The main change, so far as the effect on Government personnel is concerned, is the abolition of the quasi independent Federal Alcohol Administration, whose functions are transferred to the Bureau of Internal Revenue to be integrated with those of the bureau's alcohol tax unit.

Most of the saving, it is said, will be due to this. The FAA has about 160 employes, and about half of these are expected to be absorbed by the Internal Revenue Bureau. The remainder, including top offi-

CABINET MEETS IN SECRET—II

As I was saying, Secretary Ickes is often the most silent of the 15 at Cabinet meetings; and when he speaks he usually speaks softly, as if this weren't the occasion.

Harlan Miller

And, quite properly, Secretary Perkins speaks more than her masculine colleagues, or so it sometimes seems to them; or at least they say so, just to jolly a lady.

* * * *

This is partly because of the internecine warfare in labor, partly because Frances Perkins usually brings to the Cabinet room a larger dossier of problems, partly perhaps because she is a woman.

Some of these problems, a few of her colleagues think, are not quite of Cabinet stature. But her data on unemployment is often more important than some of them surmise.

* * * *

Usually the Cabinet sessions last about 105 minutes. From 15 to 20 different matters come up at the average meeting.

So the average time devoted to each is 5 to 7 minutes. But some are disposed of in a minute or two, some take much longer.

* * * *

Most of the matters discussed are large matters; little time is devoted to trifles. Treasury and State matters are kept at a minimum because Morgenthau sees the President regularly each week at lunch on Monday, and foreign affairs are on a day to day basis with Hull often on the other end of the phone.

"—Mrs. Perkins gets a word in"

Politics seldom, almost never, rears its homely head at the Cabinet confabs. They're all Democrats together, but an unwritten tradition taboos consideration of party matters.

This has been different in other Cabinets; this one discusses politics on other occasions.

* * * *

Among a group of men who have met together so regularly for so long, there is surprisingly little anecdotage or even polite spoofing. Occasionally the President tells a story that has amused him, and sometimes Henry Wallace relates an anecdote to illustrate a point.

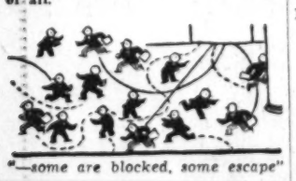
But the atmosphere is formal and ritualistic.

* * * *

All the chairs face the table squarely, but the President's advisers usually turn so they face him at the head of the table, as they talk or listen. Their words are directed at him; but once in a while there is a difference of opinion and they concentrate on the dissident member or undecided colleagues.

* * * *

When the Cabinet explores the wilderness of economics, some of the members look as if they'd like to doze off; half of them have little or nothing to say; it's all Greek. Hull, Wallace and Morgenthau have the best grasp of economics, with Wallace probably the best informed of all.



"—some are blocked, some escape"

Harry Hopkins has attended few Cabinet meetings in more than a year. He was on hand several times around six weeks ago, looking much healthier, until he caught the flu.

Farley says very little.

Edison's remarks are terse and factual, but partly an exercise in ventriloquism.

Woodring has been called upon often lately, because of the defense program, but usually speaks briefly.

When the turn of Jesse Jones, McNutt and Carmody comes, it is often almost time to adjourn.

* * * *

Because of the creation of so many emergency agencies, the Cabinet nowadays functions somewhat less as an "advisory" body on policy (its historic role) than as the President's private information agency on administrative matters, submitting progress reports.

But it is still an extremely powerful group, and its membership has definitely risen from 10 to 14.

Under another administration its membership might drop back to 10 or 11 while its power rises sharply.

* * * *

A few minutes before 4 o'clock the meeting adjourns. Everyone rises as the President leaves. Occasionally someone buttonholes him for a last semiprivate word; Mrs. Perkins, perhaps, because her turn hasn't come until almost time for adjournment . . . The members gather up their papers, their tension relaxes a little, and they run the gantlet through the newsmen in the foyer. Some are blocked for a little verbal sparring. Others circle the ends and make it safely out to their limousines and back to their desks.

Taft to Avoid Primary Races Except in Ohio

Repudiates N. J. Filing; To Stick to Commuting Distance From Capitol

By Robert C. Albright

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, yesterday indicated he will enter no Republican Presidential primaries except in his own State unless challenged within commuting distance of the Capitol.

Neutral onlooker in yesterday's two-cornered Wisconsin tilt between his two closets G. O. P. rivals, Taft repudiated filing of his name for the New Jersey primary ballot and adhered to his former technique of cultivating delegates outside the pledged primary lists.

If New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey files in Maryland or in West Virginia, within easy plane or train reach of Washington, Taft managers said the Ohio Senator would be swift to challenge him.

But he quickly asked that his name be kept off the New Jersey ballot after a petition was filed there in his behalf Monday.

Filed Without His Knowledge

"This petition was filed without my knowledge or consent and I therefore decline to have my name printed upon the primary election ballot as a candidate for President and respectfully request that it be not certified by the county clerk," Taft wrote the Secretary of State of New Jersey.

Before leaving for Columbus, Ohio, to participate with Gov. Bricker tonight in an Ohio State Republican rally, Taft, whose friends believe he has already garnered some 300 delegate votes, said Senate duties will prevent him from conducting long-distance primary campaigns.

Despite yesterday's spotlight on the Wisconsin primaries, the day brought these other political developments:

The President evaded another third-term query on whether he had taken a "mortgage" on 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. He said the census taker didn't ask him that question. Recently he has said he might tell the census taker to see if he could keep the secret.

Milligan to Announce in Missouri

Maurice M. Milligan who successfully prosecuted the Kansas City vote-fraud cases and last week resigned as United State District Attorney at Kansas City, was expected momentarily to announce for Missouri's Democratic Senatorial nomination, making it a three-cornered race with Harry S. Truman and Gov. Lloyd C. Stark.

Postmaster General Farley was quoted in an Associated Press interview from Belleville, Ill., as saying it was "elemental" that "any candidate for President on the Democratic ticket must wholeheartedly approve the policies of the Roosevelt Administration, its aims, purposes and accomplishments."

In Salt Lake City, former Gov. Curley of Massachusetts said information from sources close to the White House has convinced him that the President will not run again. Curley picked Farley to succeed him.

Former Gov. Louis Brann of Maine conferred at the White House, but President Roosevelt said he merely called to pay his respects and no politics was discussed. Brann recently has been mentioned as a probable candidate for the seat held by Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, who will retire.

No Comment on Lewis' Threat

The President smilingly declined to comment on C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis' threat to organize a third party movement if the Democratic Party fails to nominate a candidate acceptable to labor. Mr. Roosevelt said he saw no more reason why he should comment on that than on a number of other news developments.

Both Gov. Bricker, of Ohio, a "dark horse" G. O. P. candidate in his own right but who is supporting the Taft candidacy, and Senator Taft will address the Republican State rally in Ohio tonight.

Taft's name will go unopposed on the Ohio Republican primary ballot which will be submitted to the Buckeye State voters May 14, and Ohio's ensuing "favorite son" delegation will furnish the nucleus of Taft's bid for the nomination at the Republican Convention.

Meanwhile both Taft and his managers have been busy in the South and in the border States making friends and picking up delegates. They claim, for example, 8 of the 9 Republican delegates already elected in North Carolina.

Taft's future long-distance campaigning will be confined to weekend forays out of Washington, rather than lengthy stump tours, due to pressure of Senate business. He has scheduled one speech in St. Louis on April 20 and is tentatively considering others May 17 and 18 at Topeka, Kan.

Once Opposed by Truman

Way for the three-cornered fight for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in Missouri was paved by resignation of Milligan as United States district attorney. Announcing his intention "to become a candidate for public office," Milligan resignned in compliance with the Hatch "clean politics law" banning candidates from holding administrative office.

Although Milligan did not say what office he intended to seek, it was reliably understood he will bid for the Senatorial nomination. Senator Truman, who is up for reelection, thus will be faced with the opposition of the man whose reappointment as district attorney he fought in 1938. Truman and Gov. Stark, who is seeking a pro-Roosevelt delegation to the Democratic convention, already have filed in the Senate race.

Senator Clark, of Missouri, who is opposed to a third term for the President and is warring with Stark for control of an uninstructed Missouri delegation, was responsible for appointment of Milligan as district attorney in 1934.

Milligan prosecuted the Kansas City vote fraud cases which exposed padding of election returns in Jackson County. Pending then were the cases against "Boss" Thomas J. Pendergast and R. Emmet O'Malley for income tax fraud. Following reappointment in 1938, Milligan obtained confessions from Pendergast and O'Malley, and they were sent to Leavenworth prison.

Michigan on Republican Side, Poll Indicates, As Presidential Campaign Gets Under Way

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 2.—As the American people begin to choose sides for another Presidential campaign, the surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate that Michigan, with its 19 electoral votes, is leaning to the Republicans at this time.

Not until next summer will Michigan voters know the identities of the two Presidential candidates, but the Institute's surveys show that approximately 54 Michigan voters in every hundred with opinions on the party contest today favor a Republican administration in Washington.

GALLUP

A cross-section of Michigan voters was asked: "Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election." The vote of those with opinions on the question was:

Favoring Republican Victory 54%
Favoring Democratic Victory 46%

About one voter in seven (14 per cent) said he was undecided about his party choice at present.

8 States on Record

So far in the Institute's preview of the 1940 campaign, party standings have been reported in eight States. With Michigan on the Republican side at this time are New Jersey, Massachusetts and Iowa, Institute studies show, while New York, Pennsylvania, Minnesota and California are leaning to the Democrats.

Althoug the weight of electoral votes in these eight States favor the Democrats (116 electoral votes to 63) it is too early to be sure of the present electoral picture in the country at large. What does appear from a study of these eight States is that the strength of the Democratic Party has suffered a sharp decline as compared with President Roosevelt's vote in 1936.

Four years ago Michigan cast 59 per cent of its major party vote for Mr. Roosevelt, but today's survey shows the Democratic Party with only 46 per cent of the preference vote—a drop of 13 points.

In the other seven States the Democratic drop has been as follows: New York, 7 points; Pennsylvania, 7 points; New Jersey, 13 points; Massachusetts, 9 points; Iowa, 10 points; Minnesota, 16 points, and California, 10 points.

In Michigan, the survey shows, Republican strength is almost exactly what it proved to be in the 1938 mid-term elections, when the Republican gubernatorial candidate, Frank D. Fitzgerald, since deceased, received 53 per cent of the State vote. Republican Congressional candidates averaged 54 per cent of the vote throughout the State.

If President Roosevelt should be the Democratic candidate again, could the Democrats repeat their Michigan triumphs of 1932 and 1936? That is one of the questions in the minds of party leaders in both camps today.

40 Per Cent for Third Term

The Institute's tests show that although Mr. Roosevelt is approved by 63 per cent of Michigan voters as a second-term President, only 40 per cent say they are ready—at this time—to vote for Roosevelt for a third term.

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term, will you vote for him?" voters were asked. Their replies were:

Would Vote for Third Term	40%
Would Not Vote for Third Term	60%

Nine per cent of those interviewed said they were undecided on the question.

Much would depend on the choice of candidate made by the Republicans next June, on the course of the war abroad, and on the kind of campaign waged by the Democrats, but the indications are that President Roosevelt would face an uphill struggle in a third term fight in Michigan at this time.

Census Stumps Mr. Roosevelt

dent, blushingly entered the White House executive offices late yesterday in the company of his boss, Census Director William L. Austin. Mr. Roosevelt said he had read the questions through and had no hesitation in answering them.

Asked at his press conference whether he and Mrs. Roosevelt would be counted as part of the population of Washington, he replied that he did not know. Austin will have to decide this, he explained.

He pointed out that he was not a legal resident of the District.

What About "Mortgage?"

In response to a press conference question as to what he said about "the mortgage," the President replied that that came in the category of income over $5,000, concerning which specific answers are not required. The questioner had reference to the public debt, now nearing the $45,000,000,000 statutory limit.

Vice President Garner was counted at his Capitol office by pretty, dark-eyed Catherine G. Parker, assistant area manager.

"No, ma'am" he told her, "I haven't got a mortgage on my property. I don't owe anybody anything except love and affection."

Senator Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, received a census blank, and like other members of Congress received it with an invitation to fill it in and mail it. An aid said Tobey, who has been leading the opposition to the queries about income, would refuse to answer certain of the questions but had not yet decided whether to mail the questionnaire with the queries unaswered, or decline altogether to take advantage of the privilege of replying by mail on the ground that the man-on-the-street would not be entitled to do so.

Some 25,000 Washington doors opened to census takers' knocks yesterday as Uncle Sam launched his great, nation-wide decennial quest for population facts and figures.

Not A Single Refusal

And at the close of the first day's count, not a single District resident had refused to answer any of the 33 questions put to him, said Garnett Brown, director of local enumerations.

"There was no trouble anywhere," said Brown. "From all reports, the public cooperated to the fullest extent and gave us all the information we needed."

A corps of 560 local enumerators started punching doorbells shortly after 8:30 a. m. At the end of the day, Brown estimated that upward of 25,000 individuals had been questioned.

Washington enumerators were but a small part of the army of 120,000 question-askers who took to the highways and byways in search of statistics yesterday.

The opposition of Senator Tobey was pushed to the background as the huge census march got underway. From early State-wide reports, there were no serious instances of a citizen refusing to answer queries.

579, the Vandenberg quartet an average of 23,733.

Although the President far outstripped Garner in the popular vote, the tabulation of more than one-fourth the precincts indicated that one Garner candidate for delegate-at-large might win. He is William R. Callahan, son of John Callahan, an Al Smith Democrat for many years.

The Democrat delegate-at-large vote in 830 precincts:

Roosevelt-Farley ticket—Charles Henny 18,254; William B. Rubin, 18,727; Joseph H. Wallis 16,412; A. Matt Werner, 16,760.

State conference endorsed (Roosevelt-pledged) ticket—Francis E. McGovern, 17,207; Gustave Keller, 16,595; Charles E. Hammersley, 15,818; Julius G. Seyfert, 12,112.

Garner ticket—William R. Callahan, 17,805; James E. Finnegan, 14,692; Maurice J. Fitzsimmons, 13,815; Adam Port, 12,592.

Daniel W. Hoan, dean of the Nation's big city mayors, appeared in imminent danger of defeat on the basis of incomplete returns from the Milwaukee municipal election.

With nearly three-foutrs of the vote counted, the mayor trailed 32-year-old Carl F. Ziedler by almost 10,000.

Returns from 300 precincts out of 435 gave:

Zeidler, 75,515; Hoan, 65,653.

Zeidler, handsome young singer whose fine barytone voice was put to use in the campaign to entertain audiences at his rallies, resigned as assistant city attorney to oppose the mayor's re-election.

Hoan, a Socialist, has been mayor since 1916.

The election was nonpartisan.

Security Firms Are 'Shocking,' Healy Asserts

SEC Member Backs U. S. Regulation Of Companies

The record of the investment trust industry was described yesterday as "shocking" by Judge Robert E. Healy, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who testified before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Healy appeared in support of the bill drafted by the SEC for regulation of the Nation's 650 investment companies, whose assets at present have an aggregate value of about $4,000,000,000.

Chairman Jerome N. Frank of the SEC disclosed, meanwhile, that the commission would invite representatives of the National Association of Security Dealers, Inc., set up under the Maloney Act to regulate over-the-counter markets, to discuss possible changes in the present SEC arms' length bargaining rule.

The Investment Bankers' Association, in reply to a request by the commission for suggested changes in this rule, urged instead an inquiry by Congress into the acts administered by the SEC preparatory legislation removing "unnecessary" deterrents to the flow of capital into industry.

This resulted in a sharply-worded statement from the SEC criticizing the association.

George P. Rea, president of the New York Curb Exchange, who likewise attacked SEC regulatory acts and methods, yesterday asked heads of the Nation's stock exchanges to comment on a proposed investigation of the 1933 Securities Act and the 1934 Securities and Exchange Act by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

In his letter to the exchanges, made public in New York, he said "many with whom I have talked, both here and in Washington, share with me the belief that the securities legislation has tended to block the normal processes of investment and to continue the problem of unemployment."

35 Urge Amendments

Frank thanked Wallace H. Fulton, executive director of the National Association of Security Dealers, for suggestions concerning the arms' length bargaining rule. This was not made public, he pointed out. The reply of the Investment Bankers' Association was.

The deadline for replies to the commission's request fell yesterday. About 60 replies were received, of which about 35 contained specific suggestions for amending the rule, the SEC said.

The arms' length bargaining rule deals with investment banker fees for handling utility company security issues which the commission is required to approve.

Healy, Republican commission member who had general supervision of the agency's investment trust study, declared investors in investment companies had suffered a shrinkage of about $3,000,000,000 in their investments.

"I am convinced, as is the entire commission," he declared, "that unless these companies are supervised they will represent a source of injury to the investor exceeding any social or economic function they may serve."

Attacking what he called investment company "abuses," he said the commission found that two witnesses questioned by it as to how they had depleted the assets of some investment companies they had dominated "literally took time off from the public examination in order to complete their arrangements to loot some other investment trusts which had come under their control."

Fusion Man Elected Mayor In Kansas City

Democrat Defeated By Majority Set At Over 15,000 Votes

Kansas City, April 2 (AP).—John B. Gage, Fusionist standardbearer, was elected Kansas City's Mayor tonight over the Democratic candidate, Flavel Robertson, by a majority calculated to run over 15,000 votes.

Gage, a scholarly, bespectacled lawyer of 58 who never before ran for public office, also appeared to have carried almost his entire "anti-Pendergast machine" ticket to victory. Returns from over half of the city's precincts indicated the fusionists would control six out of eight council seats, possibly seven.

The fusionists claimed their victory was the final body blow against the old Pendergast machine whose big boss, Tom Pendergast, is serving time in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth for income tax evasion.

Gage, after trailing Robertson in the early returns but making an unexpectedly strong run in the normally Democratic Northside precincts, overtook his opponent before one-third of the city's 482 precincts were heard from.

When half were counted, his lead was over 5,000. The unofficial vote at that point:

Gage, 42,255;
Robertson, 37,180.

Gage, first man in 14 years to become mayor without the Pendergast blessing, said in a radio address:

"Hats off to the valiant soldiers who worked the Northside wards of the machine. The hand of welcome to the city hall is extended to all Kansas Citians.

"We were elected to rid the city government of the corrupt system of the past. Our orders are to purify it and keep it pure. We are committed to this task heart and soul."

The total vote today was estimated at between 175,000 and 180,000 as against a registration of approximately 203,000.

vent the layoffs that would otherwise be necessary. The liberal bloc" met last night to coordinate its efforts.

An attempt also will be made—and there were reports yesterday that the WPA itself might present this request—to strike from the law the requirement that the annual appropriation be spread out over the entire 12 months with an eye to avoiding supplementary requests during the latter part of the year.

But all such attempts are sure to be vigorously resisted by the relief subcommittee, headed by Representative Woodrum, of Virginia. Yesterday Woodrum indicated both that he favors the smaller WPA appropriation and also that he is vehemently opposed to lifting the 12-month" provision of the law.

At the close of yesterday's executive session at which J. 'Connor Roberts, committee counsel, presented his report, Representative Woodrum stated that the data would be kept in custody of the committee until after Harrington is heard tomorrow.

It is understood that no decision will be reached on continuation of the investigation or on the holding of public hearings, until after the WPA's 1941 estimates are presented.

The Post was informed that the data given the committee yesterday included accounts of such practices as WPA construction work on private property and travel of some WPA employes between home and office at Government expense.

Msgr. Corrigan Consecrated as Bishop In Solemn Rite Before Half U. S. Hierarchy

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

In an ancient and solemn ritual witnessed by nearly half the American hierarchy, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the Catholic University of America, was consecrated titular Bishop of Bilta yesterday.

He was anointed and given the crozier, the episcopal ring, the book of Gospels and the mitre by Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, the new bishop's native city.

Fifteen hundred persons assembled in the partly completed National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, on the university grounds, to watch the medieval ceremonial attending the consecration.

There were 9 archbishops, 38 bishops and 91 monsignori, all resplendent in their purple; Michael Francis Doyle, prominent Philadelphia lawyer, wearing the white cloak and plumed headpiece of a Knight Commander of the Holy Sepulchre; diplomats and members of Congress, Catholic and non-Catholic; nuns in their black habits, brown-robed Franciscans, white-robed Dominicans and representatives of 40 different religious orders.

A procession, which started at the tomb of Bishop Shahan, former rector of Catholic University, preceded the consecration ceremony.

Cardinal Dougherty, the consecrator, was a resplendent figure, vested as for a pontifical mass, wearing the episcopal mitre and carrying the crozier.

In strong contrast, Bishop-elect Corrigan at this point was vested as a priest, a violet biretta on his head where later there would be a golden mitre. He was escorted by the assistant consecrators, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore-Washington, and the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit.

Cardinal Dougherty took his position on a faldstool on the platform of the high altar. Bishop-elect Corrigan and Archbishops Curley and Mooney occupied stools opposite. Rising, Archbishop Curley asked that the candidate be elevated to the episcopal office. Thereupon, in response to an inquiry by Cardinal Dougherty, as to the necessary documents from the Holy See, the pontifical bull of appointment was read.

After Bishop-elect Corrigan had read a lengthy oath of fealty to the Pope, and declared his willingness to live in all ways as befitted a bishop, Cardinal Dougherty began the mass.

Bishop-elect Corrigan walked to a smaller side chapel, where stood an historic chapel, that used by Bishop John Carroll, patriarch of the American hierarchy, at Forest Glen in colonial times. Here the bishop-elect put aside his cope and donned the pontifical vestments for the first time. Then he began reading the mass simultaneously with Cardinal Dougherty.

Returning to the high altar, Bishop-elect Corrigan stood before Cardinal Dougherty, who admonished him as to his duties as a bishop—to judge, to interpret, to ordain, to offer sacrifice, to baptize and to confirm.

While Bishop-elect Corrigan prostrated himself on the altar steps, the congregation chanted the Litany of the Saints. A little later, Cardinal Dougherty removed his gloves and anointed the head of Bishop-elect Corrigan with the oil of holy Chrism.

The crozier was then placed in the hands of Bishop-elect Corrigan with the following words:

"Receive the staff of the shepherd's office so that in the correction of vice you may be lovingly severe, giving judgment without wrath, softening the minds of your hearers as you foster their virtues, not neglecting strictness of discipline through love of peace."

Cardinal Dougherty placed the episcopal ring on the third finger of the right hand of the new bishop, and then delivered the Book of Gospels into his hands. He then gave to Bishop Corrigan the "kiss of peace."

The mass was resumed, but first, in line with ancient custom, Bishop Corrigan presented Cardinal Dougherty with certain gifts—two lighted candles, two loaves of bread, and two small casks of wine.

More than 1,000 persons are expected to attend a reception in Bishop Corrigan's honor tonight in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel. It is being sponsored by the Calvert Club of Washington, composed of local businessmen and civic leaders. A dinner at 6:15 p. m. in the hotel will precede the reception, which is to start at 8:30 p. m.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra Tuesday night in Constitution Hall with Rose Bampton as soloist. Program: Overture to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), Symphony No. 1, "The Santa Fe Trail" (McDonald), "L'Annee en vain" (Debussy), "Chere Nuit" (Bachelet), "Daybreak" (McDonald), "Wiegenlied" (Richard Strauss), "Pace, mio Dio" (Verdi), "The Swan of Tuonela" (Sibelius), "La Reine Mab" (Berlioz), "Kaiser Walzer" (Johann Strauss).

Apart from the pleasure one always derives from the playing of the Philadelphia Orchestra, two features of its final concert of the season last evening in Constitution Hall were eminently satisfactory: The local premiere of Harl McDonald's first symphony and the singing of Rose Bampton, whose appearance as soloist was a compensation for the disappointment caused by the temporary incapacity of Frances Nash. While the substitution of a soprano for a pianist involved a change of values, the audience made the shift without difficulty and received Miss Bampton with a cordiality that resulted in half a dozen recalls.

BROWN

Miss Bampton's popularity in Washington dates from the days when she was a contralto, and it was evident that the raising of her range has not altered her standing in that regard. Neither has it depreciated the artistry with which she uses vocal resources of admirable quality. One may still feel a partiality for the rich tones of her lower register without denying the firmness and resonance of her upper tones, and her power of emotional projection has been extended in gamut.

Miss Bampton's dramatic and lyric assets were contrasted at her first appearance when she gave an eloquent reading of Lia's recitative and aria from Debussy's cantata, "L'Enfant Prodigue," and followed it with a finely accented interpretation of Alfred Bachelet's lovely song, "Chere Nuit." After the intermission she continued to display this opposition by singing Harl McDonald's impassioned "Daybreak;" Richard Strauss' delicate setting of Richard Dehmel's "Wiegenlied," and the familiar Verdian histrionics of "Pace, mi Dio."

Dr. McDonald's "The Santa Fe Trail" is one of the most effective program symphonies of our time and a significant contribution to genuine American music. It is not only that the ideational foundation is taken from our national history, but also that the atmosphere of the music is autocthonous and its authenticity as an expression of national spirit cannot be questioned. The themes have a native twang and their reatment shows a characteristic independence of alien influences.

The descriptive subject matter forms a part of the epic of the American advance across the continent. Into its three movements are woven the threads of the explorers, the Spanish settlements and the covered wagons of a people seeking new homes in the West. The first movement successful evokes the feeling of immense distances, the seemingly endless stretch of the plains, the weariness of the trek, and the jubilation at the sight of the mountains.

In the second movement the composer had most adroitly adapted Hispanic dance rhythms to suggest the Spanish outposts, without losing the sense of American energy. The two racial traits are nicely blended, and there is no dichotomy between matter and spirit. In the final movement Nordic and Amerind elements appear in the themes, and the fusion is wholly convincing. The symphony is the kind of music which we can with pride call American.

While one thanks Eugene Ormandy for having brought this work to us, one cannot but regret that he chose to fill out the program with music which we can hear any day from our National Symphony Orchestra. One looks forward to the visits of the Philadelphians for something less familiar than the overture to "Die Meistersinger," "The Swan of Tuonela," "La Reine Mab" of Berlioz and the "Kaiser" waltz of Johann Strauss.

Floods Ebb Leaving 6 Dead; Rain Forecast

Thousands Flee Pennsylvania Homes; Dikes Are Holding

By the Associated Press

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 2.—Flood waters which have claimed six lives across Pennsylvania and left thousands temporarily homeless subsided an inch an hour tonight.

A forecast of rain permitted no let-up in the fight against the swirling tide—a fight of men and materials extending from this anthracite city and northeastern Pennsylvania west and south down the valley of the Susquehanna toward the Maryland border.

The feeling persisted that "the worst was over." But the flow still spread over low-lying industrial sections of Kingston, Pittston and Plymouth, adjoining Wilkes-Barre. Upwards of 6,000 sought higher ground in this region alone.

Oil Fire Threat Averted

An all-day threat however, was a fire that burned for 30 hours dangerously close to tanks containing more than 1,500,000 gallons of gasoline. The flames started yesterday in a tank which overturned and exploded. Firemen working from a raft floated on empty oil drums extinguished the blaze with chemicals tonight.

At Sunbury, 65 miles downstream, other thousands also fled. But in both cities—regarded as chief danger spots in the flood's attack—dikes were holding as workmen struggled day and night to strengthen them.

Along the 150 miles of the river below Wilkes-Barre the water was either receding or the rise apparently checked. In most places the water was falling.

At Wilkes-Barre the river came down from a high of 31.6 feet—2 feet below the high of the memorable St. Patrick's Day flood of 1936—to 30.50 feet in about 12 hours. Dikes built to guard the city at least to 33 feet after the 1936 disaster held firm.

Sunbury reported the river dropping from a high of 20.14 feet to 19.10—almost 8 feet below the 1936 high level.

Damage, though not what was feared by those who remembered the 1936 crest, was extensive. Mud and water caused heavy losses to machinery, furnishings and residence and business buildings.

One of eight bridges linking Wilkes-Barre and towns across the river was badly damaged. Part of the wooden understructure was swept away and the bridge was closed to traffic. Five other bridges had been closed as a precaution. Two remain open.

Guard Against Disease

Unless rains caused a new rise, residents of other riverbank communities expected to be able to get under way with the costly job of reconstructing and the rebuilding or strengthening of dikes.

Red Cross medical untis urged that drinking water be boiled and guarded against outbreaks of disease. Three children, refugees from flooded homes near Wilkes-Barre, were found to have scarlet fever and taken from public shelters.

From key points along the valley encouraging news came to the families who left endangered homes, slept at night in schools and churches, and watched anxiously as murky waters rose near levee tops. Some returned to homes abandoned yesterday.

Western Pennsylvania's often-flooded rivers continued to recede after swelling over the week-end near flood levels.

Central and eastern Pennsylvania streams other than Susquehanna also were receding. Water continued high on the Juniata and the Lackawanna, which flooded Scranton Sunday, but danger was reported past.

There were no estimates of the possible aggregate of flood damage in the hard-hit Susquehanna Valley.

Kingston, where part of a secondary levee—not part of the main dike system—gave way Monday was among the hardest hit of the river towns.

Across the river Wilkes-Barre was protected by its dike system and only the backed-up water from sewers flooded the lower part of the town.

Somewhere downstream from Sunbury the flood crest was lost in the widening valley. At Harrisburg and other points the river went a few feet over flood stage before the rise stopped.

N. Y. Subway Tie-up Averted, Lewis Asserts

Reassures Public After 2-Hour Talk With LaGuardia

By the Associated Press

New York, April 2.—For the second time in a week Mayor LaGuardia and John L. Lewis came to an agreement today, this time erasing the threat of a paralyzing strike on the city's two private subway lines, the B. M. T. and the I. R. T.

After a two-hour conference, the C. I. O. president set the minds of the subway-riding millions at ease.

"This entire matter is satisfactorily settled," Lewis said. "There will be no strike. We expect arrangements entered into here today will work out satisfactorily and for increasing efficiency."

The controversy has been brewing since the city's unification plan neared fulfillment. Under this program, due to go into effect May 1, the city will take over and operate the B. M. T. and I. R. T. as well as its present Independent System. Although present employes will go under civil service without examination, the C. I. O.'s Transport Workers Union feared its present contracts, covering 27,000 employes and providing closed shops, would be jeopardized.

Raised a Rumpus

LaGuardia himself raised a rumpus a month ago when he said that under unification strikes and the closed shop would be barred. Quickly the T. W. U. memberships voted to strike, if necessary, to "preserve collective bargaining rights."

Lewis and LaGuardia first met last Saturday and apparently settled the dispute with the mayor's "statement of policy," in which he said he would recommend that all terms of the existing contracts, "not inconsistent with constitutional or statutory provisions," be assumed by the city, and that any disputes be settled in the courts.

The situation reached a stage, which Lewis today called "acute," apparently through a misunderstanding. Following last week's "settlement," union leaders conferred with John H. Delany, chairman of the transportation board, and later charged Delaney had refused to follow the mayor's "statement of policy." The strike threat then was renewed.

Court Order Obtained

But after today's conference, LaGuardia read a letter he had written today to Lee Pressman, C. I. O. counsel, in which he said a resolution pending before the board carried out the agreement reached before.

Text of Roosevelt's 3d Reorganization Message

Duplications Eliminated By Mergers

President Creates Fiscal Assistant Treasury Secretary

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress on Government reorganization follows:

When I submitted reorganization plans I and II at the last regular session of Congress, I indicated that certain reorganizations of an intradepartmental character were necessary but that detailed study would be required for the preparation of specific plans. Since that time the heads of the executive departments and my own office have continued to study the internal organization of the several agencies of the Government. I have considered recommendations made to me as a result of these studies and have found it possible to make a number of needed improvements of organization by administrative action. In other instances, I can effect the necessary changes only under the procedure set up in the Reorganization Act of 1939.

I am transmitting herewith reorganization plan III which I have prepared in accordance with the provisions of Section 4 of the Reorganization Act of 1939 (Public No. 19 Seventy-sixth Congress, first session) approved April 3, 1939; and I declare that with respect to each reorganization made in this plan, I have found that such reorganization is necessary to accomplish one or more of the purposes of Section 1 (A) of the act:

1. To reduce expenditures;
2. To increase efficiency;
3. To consolidate agencies according to major purposes;
4. To reduce the number of agencies by consolidating those having similar functions and by abolishing such as may not be necessary; and
5. To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.

Changes Proposed In Treasury

Treasury Department: I am proposing two intradepartmental reorganizations relating to the Treasury Department.

The first reorganization consolidates in a fiscal service, under the direction of a permanent fiscal Assistant Secretary, those functions of the Treasury Department pertaining to financing and fiscal activities. This fiscal service will bring together the office of the Treasurer of the United States, the officer of commissioner of accounts and deposits, and the Public Debt Service, including their various subdivisions and certain other related functions.

Some adjustments are made in the assignment of functions of the units which will comprise the fiscal service, and certain changes are made in titles. The net effect of these adjustments is to establish within the fiscal service the office of the fiscal assistant secretary, the office of the Treasurer of the United States and a bureau of accounts under a commissioner of accounts, and a bureau of public debt under the commissioner of public debt. In addition to responsibility for the administration of these four segments of the department's operations, the fiscal assistant secretary is vested with the financing functions of the Undersecretary of the Treasury and of the Assistant Secretaries.

The functions brought together in the fiscal service are all closely interrelated and are essential parts of the general functions of financing and fiscal control. The internal organization of the fiscal service conforms to accepted principles of financial management and provides that framework for adequate internal controls.

At the same time, under the proposed plan these functions can be coordinated more effectively, duplications eliminated, and a more efficient service provided. To assure continued effective management of this highly important and technical phase of the Treasury functions, I am placing the fiscal service under the supervision of a career official.

The plan, therefore, provides that the fiscal Assistant Secretary will be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury in accordance with Civil Service laws and will perform his duties under the general direction of the Secretary. This is in accord with the policy of this Administration of bringing higher administrative positions within the career service. The creation of the office of fiscal Assistant Secretary will not increase the number of assistant secretaries in the Treasury Department since the plan expressly provides for the abolition of one of the three existing offices of Assistant Secretary.

Federal Alcohol Administration

The second reorganization affecting the Treasury Department vests in the Secretary of the Treasury full authority for the administration of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act. At present, the Federal Alcohol Administration occupies an anomalous position. It is legally a part of the Treasury Department, but actually it is clothed with almost complete independence under existing statutory provisions. Under certain conditions the administration would by law become an independent agency, whereas the interests of improved management require its integration with allied activities in the Treasury Department.

I propose, therefore, that the functions of the Federal Alcohol Administration be correlated with the activities of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, particularly its alcohol tax unit. The bureau is already performing a large part of the field enforcement work of the administration, and could readily take over complete responsibility for its work. The bureau is daily making, for other purposes, a majority of the contacts with units of the liquor industry which the Federal Alcohol Administration should, but cannot, make without the establishment of a large and duplicating field force.

Under the provisions of this plan, it will be possible more effectively to utilize the far-flung organization of the Treasury Department, including its many laboratories, in discharging the functions of the Federal Alcohol Administration. Thus, I find the proposed consolidations will remedy deficiences in organization and administration of marketing and the disposition of agricultural surpluses.

Because the two programs require unified planning and direction, the Secretary of Agriculture has found it desirable to designate the same person as the head of both. In one capacity, he reports directly to the Secretary of Agriculture while in the other he is responsible by law to the administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Consolidation of the two units will assure unified management, eliminate confusion in administration, and make for more efficient operation. Furthermore, this reorganization will remove from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration the legal responsibility for functions which differ administratively from its major operations.

Department of Labor: I propose to abolish the offices of Commissioner of Immigration and the offices of District Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization The former have been vacant since 1933; the latter impose an unnecessary level of supervision above that of District Director of Immigration and Naturalization in certain of our ports and should be eliminated in the interests of economy and sound administration.

Civil Aeronautics Authority: I propose to clarify the relations of the administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the five-member board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The administrator is made the chief administrative officer of the authority with respect to all functions other than those relating to economic regulation and certain other activities primarily of a rule-making and adjudicative character which are entrusted to the board. This will eliminate the confusion of responsibilities existing under the Civil Aeronautics Act and provide a more clear-cut and effective plan of organization for the agency.

Improvements and savings: The principal advantage of the reorganization proposed in this plan will be increased effectiveness of the agencies concerned. In addition to improved service, some economies may be expected. I estimate that immediate annual savings in administrative expense of approximately $150,000 will result. This comparatively small amount in no way measures the worth of the proposals. In fact, if they resulted in no administrative savings at all, I should still consider them worth while in view of the increased effectiveness of administration that will result.

Need for continuous study: The management problems of a department or agency are complex and dynamic and require much detailed analysis before findings can be made. These problems cannot be resolved by any one reorganization plan, nor at one time; their study must be a continuing process if our departmental machinery is to keep pace with the changing requirements placed on the Government. Accordingly, in conformity with the budget and accounting act, I have instructed the director of the Bureau of the Budget to continue studies in collaboration with the several departments and agencies, looking to further improvements in The Government administrative structure.

Agriculture Department

Department of Agriculture: I propose to consolidate the division of marketing and marketing agreements of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation into a single agency to be known as the Surplus Marketing Administration. This consolidation will facilitate the work of the Department of Agriculture relating to the formulation and administration of marketing agreements and orders.

Department of the Interior: Reorganization plan II transferred the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce and the Bureau of Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior and thus concentrated in one department the two bureaus responsible for the conservation and utilization of the wildlife resources of the Nation. On the basis of experience gained since this transfer, I find it necessary and desirable to consolidate these units into a single bureau to be known as the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Bureau of Biological Survey administers Federal laws relating to birds, land mammals, and amphibians, whereas the Bureau of Fisheries deals with fishes, marine mammals, and other aquatic animals. The natural areas of operation of these two bureaus frequently coincide, and their activities are interrelated and similar in character. Consolidation will eliminate duplication of work, facilitate coordination of programs, and improve service to the public.

Another provision relating to the Department of the Interior is the abolition of the statutory office of Recorder of the General Land Office. This office is a relic of the quill and sand box period in the transcription of land records. Its duties can readily be absorbed by the regular civil service personnel of the Land Office.

cials, it is indicated, probably will be dropped. Those retained, it is said, will have to qualify under civil service.

Asked at his press conference about the controversy over a proposal for transfer of the United States Forest Service to the Interior Department, the President said he was preparing a fourth plan, which he expected to have ready about the end of this week.

He warned newswriters not to get out on a limb with any predictions as to what this plan would contain. This was interpreted to mean that it might include interdepartmental transfers of some importance.

The reorganization order will go into effect in 60 days, provided Congress does not disapprove. Congress can veto any part. Other changes follow:

A permanent fiscal career service, headed by a Fiscal Assistant Secretary of the Treasury who will be a civil service appointee, is established in the Treasury.

The administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority is given the title of "Administrator of Civil Aeronautics," and will discharge all functions except those relating to economic regulation and certain other activities primarily of a rule-making and adjudicative character." The latter functions will be left in the hands of the authority's five-man board.

The offices of commissioner of immigration of the several ports, and the offices of district commissioner of immigration and naturalization, are abolished.

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation of the Agriculture Department and the division of marketing and marketing agreements of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration are consolidated into an agency known as the Surplus Marketing Administration.

The Bureau of Fisheries and the Bureau of Biological Survey, which were transferred to the Interior Department in reorganization plan No. 2, are consolidated into a new bureau designated as the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The office of recorder of the General Land Office, "a relic of the quill and handbox period in the transcription of land records," is abolished.

British Pacts With Neutrals Hit Nazi Trade

Chamberlain Tells Commons of Clause To Curb Reich Imports

By the Associated Press

London, April 2.—Prime Minister Chamberlain brandished Britain's most effective weapon—a sea-power blockade—in the House of Commons today and assured the House and the nation that new anti-Nazi trade agreements with neutrals would be used to "prosecute the economic war to the utmost" of the Allies' power.

To tighten Britain's control of raw materials which might reach Germany a "sterling line" of war trade pacts has been built around Germany, each one stipulating a strict limitation of exports to the Reich, Chamberlain disclosed.

Solemnly the prime minister warned neutral nations that any aid they give the Nazis may "render them in the end liable to the hideous fate which has overtaken previous victims of German policy."

Pacts Signed With Nordics

The new trade pacts with their export stipulations already have been signed with Norway, Sweden, Iceland, Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark, Chamberlain announced. In addition he said discussions now are under way with Switzerland, and commercial discussions are known to be going on with Spain, Greece and Turkey.

An economic drive in the Balkans was seen in his announcement that Rumania and Yugoslavia also would begin talks in London soon.

Naval Offensive Hinted

But these nations must not expect the products of Britain's empire unless they are prepared to give "guarantees of a limitation of their future trade with Germany," Chamberlain said.

"Certain practical steps" are being taken, Chamberlain said, to halt the passage of cargo ships from Scandinavia to Germany—a route over which Swedish iron ore moves to the Reich. He failed to divulge what the steps were, but the remark was interpreted as meaning that Britain would start a naval offensive against ore ships.

Bluntly the prime minister warned Germany that the British navy still controls the North Sea.

Britain's buying power—"Another weapon in our armory"—also is being brought to bear, he said. To deprive Germany of materials "most essential for the prosecution of an aggressive policy," Britain has entered Europe's markets in the manner of a spendthrift sailor on shore leave, Chamberlain indicated.

Mineral oil, whale oil and fats are being bought up by England from Southeastern Europe to Norway, and Chamberlain added that Britain intends to take "suitable measures" against a supply of war materials to Germany over hitherto unused land routes.

Such measures might be a refusal of sales to nations contiguous to Germany such as Russia, who has not been drawn by the magnetism of the Bank of England into the trade-pact ring.

Chamberlain earlier had stated in reply to a question that Russian-German cooperation was "most marked" in economic matters.

Swedes Warn Allies

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 2.—The Swedish government, it was learned today, has warned the Allies that any attempt to seize German iron ore ships in Norwegian territorial waters will amount to an invitation to Germany to cut off all Allied trade with the Scandinavian countries.

Swedish and Finnish ships carrying timber, wood pulp and other products to Great Britain, Swedish officials pointed out, depend for passage through the Baltic under the protection of Swedish, Danish and Norwegian territorial waters, and, they added, the British must expect German submarines to immediately start operating in these waters if the Allies violate Norwegian waters.

It is felt here, however, that northern products will be able to travel safely in Allied convoys from Narvik or other Norwegian ports, even if the Baltic route is plugged.

Apparently the only thing holding up Allied action in Norwegian waters is the desire to give Norway time to reconsider her position. When, and if it appears that she cannot forbid Germany to ship ore from Narvik, the Allies will put in their plan of naval action which is believed to have passed the last meeting of the Supreme War Council.

41 Army Units Called to Colors In Switzerland

Country Seeks to Keep Man Power Equal To Any One Belligerent

By the Associated Press

Bern, April 2.—Switzerland moved nearer general mobilization today as the general staff summoned to active service 41 army units totaling tens of thousands of troops. They are to report April 15 and 22.

The call was connected with the high command's announced determination to keep the Swiss strength as closely as possible on a level with the number of troops any one belligerent has stationed near Switzerland's borders.

The order explained that numerour units had been recalled to replace those recently demobilized but few units have been released. The 41 units range from companies to brigades.

Swiss military quarters believe the Germans have between 12 and 18 divisions (about 180,000 to 270,000 men) in the Baden and Wurttemburg areas north of Switzerland. Swiss officials said, however, that their presence "gives no immediate cause for alarm."

This attitude was reflected in Basel, near the long dormant Upper Rhine Front between Germany and France.

Basel officials said today 40,000 persons had visited the nation-wide sample fair which opened with 1,100 exhibitors in a hall only a mile from the French Maginot Line and German West Wall over the weekend. Visitors from all parts of the country have flocked to the city, keystone of the Swiss defense system, which literally bristles with fortifications.

Blast in Scottish Munitions Plant Kills 3, Injures 5

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 2.—In the fifth explosion of its kind since the outbreak of war, three workmen were killed and five seriously injured tonight when a blast, heard 10 miles away, rocked a munitions factory somewhere in Scotland.

The cause of the explosion has not yet been determined, a court of inquiry was appointed while firemen were still fighting the blaze that broke out afterward.

The explosion occurred in a building isolated from the main factory, completely wrecking the structure. Many inside the factory grounds were knocked off their feet.

Hundred gathered outside the main gates, anxiously clamoring for news of relatives and friends employed in the factory.

Wisconsin Woodsmen Among the Many Due For Festival Apr. 25

A Viking returned from Valhalla probably would not know what to make of a Viking 'cello, but the peculiar instrument means a great deal to his lumberjack descendants of Wisconsin.

The Viking 'cello is but one of a number of timber camp instruments which will be brought by Wisconsin lumberjacks to the National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall April 25, 26 and 27. The first type of 'cello made by Scandinavian immigrants consisted of a cracker box fastened to a broom stick. Through the years it has been polished and prettied up with ancient Norse decorative symbols, and it is now one of the most attractive of America's folk instruments.

Other instruments to be played here include the bangalo, made from a washtub and peavy, and the gut hammer, a heavy steel triangle used to call men to camp at mealtime.

For Sing Sessions

The jacks' Washington trip was made possible by Gov. Julius P. Heil, who has given his personal check for $500 to Mr. and Mrs. Otto Rindlisbacher and Mayor J. H. Wallace, of Rice Lake, Wis., sponsors. The Indian Head Association, of Wisconsin also is cooperating to send the group, which is composed entirely of veterans of the logging days.

The early lumberjacks created their instruments to accompany the evening sing sessions held in the bunk house. As was the case with the barber shop choruses of urban communities, vocal quality frequently had to compete with sheer volume. "Bull roarer" was the term applied to the logger who could bellow; the "wailers" were the rare sweet-voiced individuals whose solo renditions of such tear-jerkers as "Pinery Boy" held their comrades spellbound during the long, cold evenings. Both bull roarers and wailers will take part in the festival's "bunkhouse evening."

Norse Influence

Most of the songs to be heard here were composed during the golden age of lumbering in the 1870's and followed the traditions of the British Isles. Later the influx of Scandinavian immigrants gave the songs the same Norse influence which affected the evolution of the lumberjacks' musical instruments.

As has been the case for the last two years, the National Folk Festival is sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association. Tickets for the three matinees and three evening performances are now on sale at The Post. Prices range from 50 cents to $1.50.

Wartime Plan To Mobilize Italians of 13

Council of Ministers Approves Program For Both Sexes

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 2.—The council of ministers today approved a bill providing for civil mobilization in war time, which will include not only men and women but children of both sexes from 13 years up.

The action is further evidence of the thorough preparations being made by Italy to face the crises expected if the war is intensified.

In addition, a law regulating the feeding of civilians and the military forces in war was published in today's Official Gazette.

The army and navy are also being strengthened and, in fact, another bill approved today provides for a greater development of "the Maritime Artillery Militia," charged with coastal defense.

Another reinforcement of a war measure decreed today is an order forcing all property owners to demolish iron grilles of every sort and turn the metal over to the state. A campaign had already been started to do this, but evidently the response was not adequate.

Virginio Gayda foresees another measure so drastic that it will result in the demolition of all lamp posts, traffic stands and even supports for electric power lines. In that way "thousands and thousands of tons of iron will be recuperated," he asserts.

Another measure increases the salaries of state employes to a total sum of 650,000,000 lire starting April 27. Gayda says the amount could not have been more in view of the strain on the budget which is already heavily in deficit.

Newspapers are all predicting a critical and highly important week, but the prediction is based on expected Allied measures to strengthen the blockade, not on anything that is expected in this part of the world.

Rumania Calls Youth to Farm Crops for Nazis

4,000,000 Drafted To Speed Agriculture Exports to Germany

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, April 2.—In a dual move to satisfy export demands, chiefly from Germany, and to keep 1940 farm production normal, Rumania announced today that 4,000,000 of her youths would be drafted into a vast agricultural army.

Diplomatic sources viewed the project as an answer to a German request that Rumania reduce her 1,600,000 armed forces by one-third in order to release men for grain production for the Reich.

The German suggestion is said to have been accompanied by an offer to send 6,000 Nazi agricultural experts into Rumania to speed up production of cereals.

Under the government's program, many students will be released from school for a two-week period for work on farms.

Although the original German demobilization proposal has become a pivotal point in the current German-Rumanian economic talks, Rumanians hold that it would not be safe to reduce armed strength at present.

On the other hand, Germany has expressed fear that exports of Rumanian cereals to Germany will dry up unless steps are taken to boost Rumania's lagging agricultural production, hard hit by a severe winter, late spring and widespread floods.

See British Threat

Whether the "youth army" plan will satisfy Berlin is problematical. Privately, Germans expressed the suspicion it might be a mere gesture.

Government circles, reacting to Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration in London today that neutrals cannot have British products unless they limit their trade with Germany, detected a new threat to Rumania's efforts to avoid war by trying to satisfy all comers. It is argued here that capitulation to the British will increase the danger of forceful German action against Rumania, but Rumania is dependent on British metals, cotton, wool, munitions and rubber.

Government Finds Sick Leave Loophole

By Edward Ryan

An old "loophole" in the new liberalized code of rules covering vacations and sick leave for Government employes was cited yesterday as a high-powered trouble-maker, liable to speedy amendment if it becomes generally exploited by employes.

The code, approved by the President over the week-end, removes earlier inconsistencies.

The loophole in the regulations which is perplexing some officials comes in the case of Government employes who might borrow leave in advance, and then resign from the service.

The regulations say that in cases of separation where an employe owes the Government for advance annual leave, the debt shall be charged against his salary.

The hitch, officials said, comes between salary, and repayment requirements. An employe borrowing a month of leave in advance would receive his full month's pay check. If he left the service and repaid what the rules require, he would have to pay back but 26 days' salary or less.

It hasn't become a problem yet, officials said, but it leaves enough way for abuses so that they are giving serious study to amendment possibilities.

Census operators have killed off one of the largest hopes of the educators.

For years educators have looked at the steadily dropping line of illiteracy, waited for the day when they could see it disappear. Now the census man has left out the question, and educators won't have such gay statistics to quote as:

"The United States has more people who cannot read than it has college graduates."

That was 1930 vintage, and the passing of similar statistical short cuts after this census will give scant cause for mourning. The story of why the literacy question was left off the census is one that has dozens of Government officials pleased.

Census officials yesterday said that it had been done largely because of the education work of the CCC and WPA and other agencies. The 1930 census showed that 4.3 per cent of Americans over 10 were illiterate. Now estimates are that illiteracy has dropped below 1 per cent, too inconsequential to be worth recording for statistical purposes.

But while the census is content with the illiteracy score, Federal Security Administrator McNutt yesterday told about plans for continuing the CCC education program which has taught some 80,000 enrollees to read and write. Two workbooks, taking their lessons out of the camp life, are being placed in camps throughout the country, and officials said the CCC workers are learning to read and write in an average period of three or four months.

WPA officials say their own program of adult education has promoted nearly 1,500,000 adults into the ranks of the literate. During a two-week spot count in January this year 308,860 persons were enrolled in literacy and naturalization courses in WPA projects.

"They can't laugh off this evidence," he declared.

Though no arrests were made in the raids, at least six persons were served with subpenas.

Testimony of a pretty, blonde New York girl, and Representative Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, who headed a House committee investigating un-American activities in 1934, brought these developments:

Dickstein charged Pelley with "treason to the United States," and asserted he had documentary proof Pelley and some Army officers planned to lead a revolt against the Government.

Miss Dorothy Waring, former confidential secretary for an affiliate of the Silver Shirts, testified Pelley, in a two-hour visit at her apartment, described how he planned to seize control of New York, then the Federal Government at Washington.

The committee issued subpenas for Capt. S. J. Rubley, Michigan National Guard officer, of Detroit, named by Dickstein as the author of letters as a recruiting officer for the Silver Shirts, and Harold Weber, also of Detroit, alleged head of the Ku Klux Klan in Michigan.

The House unanimously voted a contempt citation against George Powers, Pittsburgh, secretary of the Allegheny County Communist Party, for refusal to answer questions of the Dies Committee.

The committee voted a contempt citation against Dr. Albert E. Blumberg, Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland-District of Columbia Communist Party organization.

Miss Waring, a blue-eyed blonde, sparked the committee's session with a description of Pelley's visit to her Park avenue apartment, after she had become acquainted with him while she was serving as secretary for Robert Scott Gulden, then head of the "Order of '76" in New York.

She was "planted" in Gulden's office, she said, by Dickstein, to obtain information for his 1934 committee investigating un-American activities.

"He (Pelley) came to call in full uniform with two bodyguards," she testified. "After he had looked around to be sure it was safe, he dismissed the bodyguard. Then he took off his leather coat and a shoulder holster with a gun. He kept on a hip holster with a gun.

"He thought I had money and could help him. He spent two hours explaining the Silver Shirts. He said they planned to place seven men in key spots, such as water and power plants, to seize control of New York. He said they eventually would march on Washington, and that he would be dictator—that he was modeling his actions after Hitler."

Pelley boasted, Miss Waring said, he was "too strong" for the Government to prosecute him. She identified a German automatic pistol, emblazoned with the initial "L" on the base, as one of the weapons Pelley carried.

Miss Waring said Pelley told her his troops were armed, but she did not know where they obtained their weapons. Dickstein, however, and Representative Kramer (Democrat), of California, a member of the Dies Committee, asserted Pelley had an "arsenal" in San Diego, and his "troops" were well equipped. Dickstein charged that Pelley, a recent witness before the committee, did not "tell all he should have" to the committee.

Charges Pelley with Treason

"I charge Pelley with treason against the United States," Dickstein told the committee. "I have documents to prove he was tied up with Army officers. I charge from my documents that he and some Army men planned to lead a revolt against the Government."

He produced letters bearing Capt. Rubley's signature to Robert B. Summerville, whom he described as Pelley's "chief lieutenant," in which Rubley told of recruiting and drilling men for the Silver Shirts.

When Is the Cherry Blossom Festival?

Edgar Morris and his Cherry Blossom Festival Committee will meet today at 3 p. m. to decide whether to hold the pageant as originally scheduled on Friday and Saturday. The blossoms are scheduled to appear the week-end of April 12-14, but Frank T. Gartside, of the National Capital Parks office, who made the prediction, says, "Our blossoms are like prima donnas and they may come out tomorrow." Meanwhile, Queen of the Festival, Rose Colliflower, accepted from Robert H. Duvall (left), Legion Post commander, and Linwood H. Perkins, dance chairman, an invitation to attend the Cherry Blossom Ball of the Department of Labor Post, American Legion. It has been scheduled for Friday night at the Mayflower Hotel and they mean it

Nazis Exhibit Heaps of Files From Poland

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 2.—Press correspondents of neutral nations today were shown great heaps of disorderly files which Germany said were seized in the Polish Foreign Office after the capture of Warsaw.

From these files were extracted the 16 documents published last Friday allegedly quoting United States Ambassadors Bullitt and Kennedy on events prior to the outbreak of war.

The files, making about eight or ten large truck loads, were brought to Berlin in 120 packing boxes, officials said.

German authorities said all the files were found in Bruehl Castle in Warsaw, the Polish Foreign Office headquarters, and they denied suggestions that any of the documents had been received from Russian sources after being removed by the Poles to an eastern Polish city and seized there by the Russians.

Count Hans Adolf von Moltke said that material for additional revelations promising to be embarrassing to many chancelleries was being studiously organized. He refused to admit that he had another "bombshell" prepared for American or other diplomatic representatives, but he did say that the vast store of documents was "amazingly revealing."

Von Moltke laughed at the suggestion that the Germans might have falsified the documents.

"See for yourself," he said. "They weigh many tons and I do not believe there are enough Polish scholars in all Germany to have accomplished such a colossal job of faking."

Call Hitler a Murderer

Paris, April 2 (AP).—The Polish government-in-exile issued a 109-page book today accusing Germany of trying to "murder deliberately" the Polish fatherland.

The booklet asserts that the population in the German-occupied regions has decreased by about 4,000,000 persons since January 15.

Defense Bill Cut; Air Base, 400 Planes Go

By John G. Norris

Sharply slashing President Roosevelt's estimates for air defense, the House Military Appropriations subcommittee has eliminated funds for more than 400 warplanes and a proposed $12,000,000 major Alaskan air base from the 1941 Army supply bill.

Members said the $921,000,000 outlay projected for the Army next year had been cut about $120,000,000 in all—of which close to $65,000,000 represents cash and the remainder contract authorizations. The measure will be put before the full House Appropriations Committee this morning and then brought to the floor at noon.

The group was said to have cut out practically all of the replacement airplanes asked by the War Department, allowing only some amphibians required for the new Puerto Rican base and few other new types—from 50 to 75 in all.

In refusing to allow $12,000,000 in contractual authorization for the proposed air base at Anchorage, Alaska, the subcommittee voted $4,000,000 for an auxiliary base at Fairbanks. Last year the Army proposed building only one base in the northern territory and obtained initial funds for consturction at Fairbanks. Later, officials decided a base was needed at Anchorage, where the climate is more moderate.

Only $2,000,000 of a $16,000,000 budget estimate for the so-called "educational order" program was allowed. The action, however, was not an economy, as the difference was added to the ordnance and other munitions funds for purchase of new Army equipment.

All administrative promotions for Army civilian employes, both here and in the field, have been eliminated, committeemen said.

Even with the cut, the Army bill will be the largest in peace-time history.

Inspect Ruins

An inspection of the White Court Apartment ruins was made yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, and Detective Sergt. Jermiah Flaherty. Dr. MacDonald said he will wait until all other reports are made before deciding whether to hold an inquest into the death of the three who lost their lives in the fire.

Col. Oehmann made a plea for additional building inspectors and criticized the leniency of the courts in imposing fines for violations of the building code during his testimony.

Only about half of the cases which the District takes to court for violations of the code, he said, lead to convictions and then the court usually imposes light fines of $10 or $15.

"This causes building owners to disregard the law, doesn't it?" asked Representative Herman P. Eberharter.

"Yes," said Oehmann. "They make changes in the buildings and then let us find them out if we can."

10 Inspectors in Field

Oehmann said he has ten inspectors in the field but that these make inspections only when a permit for building or alteration is applied for. Two other inspectors make general investigations of buildings about which there have been complaints, he said. The White Court apartments were inspected six months ago by both a building inspector and an inspector from the fire marshal's office.

Oehmann complained that the present fire escape law, last amended in 1934, exempts many "potential fire hazards" because Congress wished to be easy on persons who were forced to convert their homes into apartments during the depression.

Many of these buildings, he said, are more hazardous than was the White Court apartments.

Recommends Survey

Lauber recommended an appropriation to finance a survey of all buildings in Washington and revision of the fire escape law.

Answering complaints of members of the subcommittee, he said that modern authorities "don't look with favor on outside fire escapes." Interior fire escapes, he added, are vastly superior.

"The existence of outside fire escapes," he said, "is an admission that the building is structurally weak."

Lauber insisted that there are not many all-wooden buildings in Washington.

"This is essentially a brick city," he said.

Senate Committee Approves Young As Commissioner

The Senate District Committee yesterday unanimously reported the nomination of John Russell Young, newspaper correspondent, as District Commissioner to succeed George E. Allen April 15.

Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, intended to call up the nomination for immediate confirmation by the Senate but later decided to postpone the request until today.

Senator King said every member of the committee had signed the favorable report except Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, who was absent, and that he had approved it.

BURT'S NEW HOUR GLASS. Between auditions of entertainers and the hammering of workmen the Hour Glass is seething with preparations. Owner Burt Lopatin plans a gala opening not later than April 15, perhaps as early as April 10. There'll probably be a trio for dinner and supper dance music, with wired music used for interludes.

AU REVOIR, BILL. Tonight gives you your last chance to dance to Bill McCune's staccato rhythms in Shar-Zad. Bill leaves for New York's Essex House tomorrow after a highly successful season in Washington . . . George Duffy and his band will arrive in town today for rehearsals, open in Shar-Zad tomorrow with their "Golden Music," including three golden violins and warbler Claire.

EQUINE AND CANINE CHAMPIONS. A fat pony named "Baby Doll" and a fuzzy little terrier named "Rags" are practically stealing a couple of current floor shows. "Baby Doll" arrived in the Shoreham Blue Room a bit tired after a 747-mile jaunt from Chicago, but not too tired to play pony jokes on Shoreham patrons and take them for an occasional trot around the ringside . . . Little "Rags," wonder dog of the World's Fair, bounces out in the middle of the Lotus revue, demonstrates that he can add and subtract better than half of the customers. If you want a good bookkeeper, just try to hire "Rags."

SOCIALITE SINGER. Mary de Sibour, society songstress, has returned to the Pall Mall Room, where she proved such an attraction last year. Her finely trained soprano is effective in both popular numbers and the semi-classics.

RIDING THE AIR WAYS. Washington night spot entertainers are registering on the radio in a big way. Linda Carroll, of the Mayflower Lounge, and Jean Cathon, of the Versaille, started a clever new WRC program last Saturday. The idea of it is that Linda and Jean are singing to each other via transatlantic telephone . . . Gray Gordon's Orchestra broadcast from the Metronome Room last night, will go on the air again this evening. Be sure to listen to the Cliff Grass and Johnny Victor vocals and the Gordon swinging of "Somebody Stole My Gal."

ATTEMPTED KIDNAPING! The manager of a prominent resort hotel has been doing his best to get Milton Davis and his band away from the Rainbow Room. But Manager John Connolly, of the Hamilton, getting wind of the plan, said, "No, a thousand times, no!" The Rainbow Room orchestra remains as is.

LAUGHS IN RHYTHM. The way Evelyn Tyner, of the Neptune Room, pianos "Old Kentucky Home." Being a Hoosier Evelyn generally manages to put some "Back Home in Indianny" in the old Kentucky home . . . That oopsy-doopsy parody on "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" being put over by Tommy Carmichael at the Hi Hat . . . The way Madrillon's Mary La Marr gives surrealism to that sentimental old "Remember" by swinging it, and hot! . . . The Mayfair Rhythm Boys' version of "Everything's Been Done Before." But that number's never been done before in the way they do it . . . "She Really Meant to Keep it" as Anchor Room's Eileen George, the little mischief, gives it with firecracker intonations.

MARION WILKINS, sultry-eyed "dance internationalist," opening at Troika tonight

DRESSMAKING CANARIES. Adele Van, Lounge Riviera's dainty singer, is also a full fledged dress designer, makes many of those pretty formals she wears on the Riviera bandstand . . . Blonde Evie Knight of the King Cole Room also concocts many of her own smart clothes.

CASINO ROYAL RHYTHM. Eddy Wald's new orchestra at the Casino Royal offers bright and unusual dance music. Maestro Wald leads smartly from the trumpet. Eddy Fichetie and Jack Sevier play an extra fine piano and violin. Jo Cornell doubles on sax and the new celeste. De Vaughn Clements presides over the vibraphone and drums. Sammy Richards sings when he isn't saxophoning.

FOOD AS YOU LIKE IT. The hickory broiled steaks at Del Rio give you that happy, well-upholstered feeling . . . The tasty luncheons in the Harrington Tavern offer a pleasant variety, are substantial enough for a dinner . . . Savory lamb chops, cooked in the British manner, are among the good things that come from the Robin Hood's open kitchen . . . The Spanish chicken at Dick's Grill will convert you to the Latin idea of cookery . . . That's real home made pastry that winds up those well-cooked dinners at Maynard's.

Hull Rebuffs Bullitt Critics

armed intervention if things went badly for the Allies.

Bullitt was the guest at a luncheon given at the Capitol by Senator Barkley, the majority leader. Barkley said the luncheon was a purely social affair which had been planned for several weeks and that the incident of the White Book was not mentioned.

Among the other guests were Vice President Garner and Senators George, Schwellenbach, Guffey, Clark of Missouri, Truman, and Ashurst. Senator Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, was unable to attend.

Pittman indicated later, however, that he believed his committee would take little notice of Reynolds' resolution at its regular meeting this morning. He felt that the majority of its members are convinced that any attempt to force Welles to divulge anything whatever about his recent mission, or to require Bullitt to make any explanations of his conduct, would be an unwarranted invasion of the Executive's powers in conducting the Nation's foreign relations.

On the floor of the Senate, Barkley and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, came to the defense of President Roosevelt and Hull in a colloquy with Senator Reynolds at the time his resolution was introduced. Connally warned Reynolds that the utmost discretion should be exercised in these troublous times by members of Congress in speaking of world developments.

"I am not giving the Senator a red light to stop," the Texas Senator said, "but only a yellow light to signify 'caution'."

"I am looking for a red light against war," Reynolds replied.

Connally implied that Reynolds seemed to have in mind that the United States had started this war, had bombed civilian populations, had sunk neutral ships at sea and had committed the other acts which he found so profoundly resented by American public opinion. Reynolds conceded that the United States had not bombed any cities, but asserted American-made bombs have already been used for that purpose.

Barkley spoke for confidence in the President's conduct of foreign relations at this juncture and expressed doubt of the propriety of trying to force him or any subordinate to disclose matter of delicate international information given and received in confidence.

tions," three British Hurricanes engaged nine erman Messerschmidts and shot down three of them, according to British correspondents in France. All British planes returned safely.

French air fighters, in "numerous engagements" claimed to have shot down two German planes on French soil, and said another "was very likely" downed. One French plane was lost. (The Germans said Monday's air battles cost two French and one British plane, with one German plane lost.)

Nor were Belgium and the Netherlands immune. Belgium protested to London and Berlin after an official count listed one British and seven German planes over Belgian territory in two days. An Amsterdam dispatch said several foreign planes crossed the Dutch frontier during a four-hour "dogfight" over Germany yesterday.

Near Sylt British planes yesterday bombed German patrol boats, the air ministry said. One British plane was lost and a German fighter wrecked.

Luxembourg Envoy Arrives To Open 1st Legation in Decade

Presents Credentials to Hull Today; Hopes His Country, With Army of 260, Will Be Able to Protect Neutrality

Offering cigarettes from a large red leather box and suggesting that visitors see, in a great blue book, some lovely photographs of his country's sights, Hugues Le Gallais yesterday set about reopening a Washington legation for the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

"We like the Washington climate," he said, speaking for himself and Mme. Le Gallais. But he confessed that he never had been here in July and August.

Formally dressed for the afternoon, but as obliging as an old acquaintance to everyone who visited him at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday, the Charge d'Affaires, said he would present his credentials to Secretary Hull at 11:15 a. m. today.

With these accepted, Luxembourg, for the first time in a decade, will have a legation here. The last one closed when Luxembourg decided the interchange of commerce would not sustain it. Now, according to M. Le Gallais, there is considerable trade in motor cars, steel and other things, so, temporarily at least, the legation will be housed in the Shoreham Hotel.

Emphatically, he denied that the war accounts for his presence here. Luxembourg, he said gravely, relies on assurances from both warring sides that its independence and neutrality will be respected. His nation maintains a standing army of only 260 men.

"We hope to remain neutral and come out untouched," he said.

The Charge d'Affaires was accompanied here by his wife and 5-year-old son, Norvert, who speaks no word of English but was very excited about coming to America. He will be placed in a kindergarten here immediately, his father said.

Jelleff Backs Parole Law Amendments

Says Board Retains Functions in Changes Offered to Congress

Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the District Board on Indeterminate Sentences and Parole, yesterday indorsed the amendments sent to Congress Monday by the Commissioners and pointed out that they in no sense transfer the board's functions to the Federal Parole Board.

There are three major purposes of the amendments, he explained. First, every District prisoner would be placed on a par with regard to the proportion of the sentence he must serve before becoming eligible for parole, he said.

The Federal law now specifies a third of the sentence, he said, and the District law one-fifth with the result that prisoners sent from the District to Federal prisons are anxious to return to the District to become eligible for earlier paroles.

The amendments also will give the District Parole Board a separate budget, Jelleff said, instead of mixing it up with the penal institutions of the Welfare Department.

The third major change proposed, he said, requires courts in giving indeterminate sentences to fix the minimum in excess of one-third of the maximum.

Tom Edison's Boyhood Inspires Happy Comedy

Mickey Rooney Recreates Inventor's Youth; Commerce Official Golden Issues Bulletin; Personalities on Current Theatrical Scene

By Richard L. Coe,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

INVENTORS BEING IMAGINATIVE chaps, it's natural to think their boyhoods must be spiced with more lively escapades than even the most spirited, less inquisitive lads. In "Young Tom Edison," this idea becomes an elegant motion picture.

Because a nephew of the inventor was technical adviser on this film biography and because the Edison family has patently put its all-important seal of approval on the Mickey Rooney vehicle, it seems safe to glow that here is a heart-warming, merry film which becomes twice as endearing because of its significant aftermath.

Previewed yesterday afternoon by a group that included several Edison officials, "Young Tom Edison" finds its story in those boyhood pranks that were inspired by an independence of thought. Even if it meant carrying nitroglycerin on a wood-burning train of the Civil War era, or increasing light intensity for a midnight operation, young Tom was equal to it. With a gallant sister, admirably played by Virginia Weidler, he has such independence in Port Huron and its school that his greatest worry becomes a fear that he's "addled."

As this Civil War "Andy Hardy" with a brilliant future, Mickey Rooney shows that remarkable talent which lead George Bancroft, who plays his father in the film, to remark on his recent visit here that "Mickey is one of the finest, most intelligent actors in Hollywood." The film opens Friday morning at the Capitol and you'll be glad to have seen it.

Today's opening is the Jean Renoir film, "The Human Beast," at the Little. Simone Simon is costarred with Jean Gabin in this French story from the 20-volume series of Emile Zola's cycle on the Rougon-Macquart family, which brings up two wee matters. (1) Despite Sam Goldwyn's careful instructions to pronounce her name "Sea-moan Sea-moan," the French wouldn't do it thata way. They'd say: "Sea-mun Sea-moan," the u like o in money. (2) When he learned that Gabin was being introduced here as the Spencer Tracy of France, Actor Tracy vowed: "I'd like to be the Jean Gabin of America." J. Turner and A. Tolkins will take a bow for the foregoing Nos. 1 and 2.

Nathan D. Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce, revealed in a report released yesterday that the repercussions of the war in Europe on the American motion picture industry have not proved so devastating as anticipated. He feels that regardless of the efforts of British, French and German producers to maintain production, world markets from now on will be dependent to an increasing degree on United States studios for the feature films, a situation particularly applicable to Latin America and the Far East. The next few months look good for the foreign studios, if no untoward incidents arise, but after that the future doesn't look so pictorial.

James Bridie's fantastic comedy, "Tobias and the Angel," will be repeated this Saturday evening at the King-Smith Studio Playhouse for the benefit of the Playhouse Library Fund. Keinert Wolff, director of the playhouse, will make his first local appearance as the Archangel Raphael, which he created seven years ago on the Coast. Lamar Rowland has come down from New York's radioland to play another leading role in this story of a god who takes a holiday on earth and amuses himself by sleight-of-hand tricks on fuddled humans.

HAPHAZARD HAPPENINGS IN THE MANNERED MANNER OF OUR MANNERED BETTERS: How awful it must be to live in Chicago where some of the theaters have taken to triple bills and free dishes on bank night. No kidding . . . Nice that last summer's Cross Roads' leading lady, Izetta Jewel, is with Maurice Evans' company in his New York re-revival of "Richard II." Izetta will pay our town a hello-goodby Sunday afternoon . . . How surprisingly different—and good—is "Sidewalks of London," the Metropolitan's film with Charles Laughton and beautiful Vivien Leigh . . . There must be almost as many lights in the Loew's Palace flicker sign as there are traffic beacons on Thomas Circle . . . "Pinocchio's" music is so much better than we first gave it credit for. Take: "When You Wish Upon a Star" and "Give a Little Whistle" . . . Cab Calloway's and Sister Bessie Tharp's swinging at the Howard this week is something to long remember.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 2 (INS).—I am flying to New York today to accept Kate Smith's invitation to appear on her broadcast. Only Kate could get me to fly on such a hurried trip, but I am happy to be a part of the program which celebrates her ten years as first lady of the air lanes. I will join Tyrone Power and Annabella, who are already on their way to the big town. Ty will broadcast a scene from "Johnny Apollo."

LOUELLA PARSONS

Just before Tyrone took the train, he was told at Twentieth Century-Fox that he and the so beautiful Linda Darnell, brilliant young star of "Stardust," will furnish the romantic interest in "The Life of Brigham Young." No, Ty isn't going to play Brigham or any of the Mormon elders, but he is a name and $2,500,000, Darryl Zanuck believes, is too much money to spend without starring someone the public knows and loves. Dean Jagger is still, to make himself known. His is the title role of "Brigham Young."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Oscar Levants (June Gale) have made a date with the stork. So have the Albert Dekkers, who expect their bundle of happiness in July; Greta Garbo, Dr. Gaylord Nauser, Mrs. Harrison Williams and Frey Brown gave the Racquet Club the thrill of a lifetime when they walked into the circus ball. Greta wore her hat well down over her eyes and as soon as she saw the big crowd, disappeared; Binnie Barnes, threatened with pneumonia, was rushed to the hospital over the week-end. She was reported much improved today; Eleanor Powell and Merrill Pye act as if they mean it. So do Mary Martin and Richard Halliday; Constance Bennett, due Sunday, was delayed by weather and planed in yesterday; Arline Judge's big moment is still Tommy Guinanan and friends say it looks serious.

Arrived at Arrowhead Springs on my way home from Palm Springs just in time to congratulate Gregory Ratoff and Eugenie Leonovitch on their eighteenth wedding anniversary. Joseph Schenck entertained them at dinner and it was a gala affair; Helen Vinson, escorted by Jerry Wald, at the benefit for underprivileged children staged at Cocoanut Grove; Arleen Whelan was with Frank Swann and Patricia Ellis with Henry Willson; Bette Davis and Anatole Litvak talking shop over a Hungarian dinner at the Little Hungary.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 2.

SUMNER WELLES: Now that you're back at work in Washington, Adolph A. Berle, jr., is talking of resigning and returning to New York. That's what he said last week-end . . . Mackenzie King: Raymond Massey, who never relinquished his Canadian citizenship, was in El Morocco Sunday night, before leaving for Wisconsin, to rejoin the "Abe Lincoln" company. Massey, who was in the last war, said that when his tour is over in June, he may resume his military career. Jim Farley: One of the White House circle is the source for the assurance that the President will make no third term declaration—up to and including convention-time. If the delegates draft him, he'll be a candidate. But if they don't, there'll be nothing on the record to indicate that he sought a third term.

LEW BROWN: This is what has happened to Phil Silvers, the burlesque comic to whom you gave his first Broadway job, in "Yokel Boy," and who now is under contract to M-G-M . . . Despite his protests, Silvers was ordered to take a test for the role of the minister in "Pride and Prejudice." He donned the make-up, studied the wedding-lines given to him and then was ready . . . The Brooklyn-bred Silvers read: "There are many reasons why you two shouldn't be married. Foist." . . . "Cut," interrupted the producer. "That's enough."

HAROLD ICKES: You will receive the Brandeis award this week-end . . . F.D.R.: Your son, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., told us last week that he will attend the Democratic Convention . . . Johnny Paychek: Ed Wynn, who paid for a ringside seat to see you fight Joe Louis, said: "I know people who are happily married, who put up a better fight than that." And Arthur Donovan would have had an easier time, if he counted while you were standing, instead of while you were on the floor . . . George Abbott: Fred F. Finklehoffe and John Monks, jr., whose "Brother Rat" you produced, henceforth will work apart.

FERENC MOLNAR: Elia Kazan, who is appearing in your "Liliom," went to Fefe's Monte Carlo and studied the patrons there. When he asked their names, the following were pointed out to him: William Rhinelander Stewart, Otto Ludwig Preminger, Herbert Bayard Swope, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Mary Anita Loos . . . "I feel like a Dead-End kid," said Kazan, "because I have only two names."

GYPSY ROSE LEE: When the newspapers published the London dispatches about the strip-tease publicity there, Margie Hart tried to get a visa to go to London—but the State Department refused to grant her application . . . Abe Lyman: Your agent has signed you for an engagement at the Park Central's Cocoanut Grove, next month . . . Equity: Billy Rose, needing some veteran actors, tried to hire some from the Percy Williams Home. But they refused, lest their acceptance of a job will affect their pleasant status, and make them ineligible to live at this home for retired actors.

TONY MARTIN: Kay Williams, the model whose name has been linked with yours, is awaiting the arrival of Macoco, her South American suitor . . . Another of Miss Williams' swains is very hopeful, despite Macoco's wealth . . . "You haven't got a chance, against Macoco," he was warned. "Don't you know that he'll monopolize all her time—because he has three million dollars?" . . . "Not all her time," the Romeo stated. "Because with all that dough, he must take time off to count."

FLOYD ODLUM: Gen. Robert Wood, head of Sears Roebuck, and Alfred Cook, the lawyer, will go to Washington this week, to testify in favor of the new Investment-Trust legislation . . . Ben Cohen: Your honeymooning colleague, Tommy Corcoran, has decided to remain in Canada for an additional week. He and Peggy will return to their Washington jobs on April 15 . . . Winston Churchill: Your nephew, Esmond Romilly, who married Unity Mitford's sister, is still in Miami. He told friends that he will not resist being conscripted, but isn't anxious to fight. "As far as I'm concerned," said Romilly, "it's a boring war."

'Men Wanted' Sign Is Up In Hollywood

Film Capital in Market for the Strong, Manly Type

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, April 2.—Hollywood, which has been moaning about the dearth of Gables, Tracy's and O'Briens these many years, decided finally today to go after them where he-men can be found—in foundries, oil towns, police departments, airports and boiler works.

"We'll also look for them in newspaper offices," reported Arthur Jacobson, head of the Paramount talent department. "We don't care whether they're reporters or linotype operators, just so they've got hair on their chests.

"As for acting, we'll teach 'em that."

Kind of man Hollywood wants is the gent who'll become indignant and maybe punch the talent scout in the nose for even suggesting that he become a movie actor.

"Any guy who jumps at the chance will have two strikes on him to start," Jacobson explained. "If he thinks he looks like an actor, then he's exactly the kind of man we don't want."

Collar Ads Not Wanted

Decision to seek new actors, even at the peril of bloody noses, was forced upon Jacobson by Cecil B. DeMille, who spent three solid months looking for an actor to match up with Gary Cooper in "Northwest Mounted Police." DeMille finally selected Preston Foster and when the contract was signed, he said:

"There are only four or five actors in all Hollywood who could play the part—and most of them are committed to other studios.

"There are plenty of glamour boys around town. Plenty of walking collar ads. We have too many of them. What we do need badly are strong, manly young fellows who can act.

"We have Cooper, Gable, Tracy, O'Brien and perhaps a couple of others. But there doesn't seem to be any junior crop coming up."

We informed Jacobsen that we were in our office daily from 4 p. m. on and would be happy to see a talent scout. We said we'd even quit shaving, if that would help him discover our inherent talents. What he said wasn't to be quoted in a family newspaper—but the upshot was that we'll continue writing about acting. We won't be doing any of it ourself.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

When I saw "Rebecca," I wondered where I'd seen Florence Bates before. I couldn't place her, so called her up to find out, and discovered her background which is a honey. She studied law in Texas, became the first woman to practice law down there. In the crash of 1929, she and her husband had only one thing left—oil property in Mexico. A few years ago Mexico took that off their hands. Their finances being low, they came to California, she sold pies behind a counter in a Los Angeles bakery. Two years ago she lost her only daughter.

HOPPER

Some friends begged her to go to Pasadena Community Theater and try out for a part. Her voice is cultured, she's traveled a lot, made at least 20 trips to Europe, and they thought she was wasting her time in a bakery. So she went, read a part, and got it. The play was "Emma"—that was about two years ago.

She did some more there, and when they cast Zoe Atkins' "Evening Star," she got the star part, and said, "That's a character woman's paradise." Zoe was wonderful to her. Her agent brought her to Hitchcock, and "we sort of hit it off," said she. "He loves to tease; so do I."

When he said, "I don't remember you on the London or New York stage," she interrupted, "Just to get the record straight, I've never been on those stages; I don't know a thing about pictures. What do you propose to do about it?" "I propose to give you a test tomorrow morning," said he.

His favorite expression for her all through the picture was, "Come on, you old bag, get going." "Everybody was so kind. I've heard that Hollywood was heartbreak town, but I can't believe it." And I repeat, here's the woman to take over the mantle of Marie Dressler.

When Eddie Cantor sent out a notice, "Wanted for grand larceny," he meant it. Because 8-month-old Baby Barbara Kuintinilla, daughter of an iron worker, who's called "Chum" in "Forty Little Mothers," stole the picture from him.

We can't seem to get our screen babes straight, and again, Eddie Cantor supported a girl, not a boy. Chum is so good, they've taken an option on his—I mean her—services to do another with Eddie. I didn't get this from the studio, but from a chauffeur who had just seen the picture because he'd driven it over to the Hays office and they allowed him to look at it, too.

He doesn't care much about babies. But said, "While watching Chum, you forgot about war, mass murders for $1 a head, horse racing—tough times. That's a baby."

After many ups and downs "The Night of January 16" will blossom forth under a new title, "Private Secretary."

Edgar Snyder Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Was U. S. Marshal From 1922 Until 1934, Omaha Correspondent

Funeral services for Edgar C. Snyder, 79, former United States Marshal for the District, who died at his home in the Kennedy-Warren Apartments yesterday, are to be held at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Hysong funeral parlors, 1300 N street northwest.

Mr. Snyder was a well-known figure in the Capital because of his many years as a Washington correspondent before becoming marshal. He represented the Omaha Bee here from 1895 until 1922.

Born in Philadelphia in 1861, he attended the Freeburg Academy, the Millerville State Normal School, and received a degree in law from the University of Pennsylvania in 1880. Moving to Topeka, Kans., to practice law, he became interested in politics and abandoned his practice to become editor of the Commonwealth newspaper. He later worked for the Topeka Capital, a newspaper of which Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, was then city editor.

Came to Capital in 1895

From 1884 until 1895 Mr. Snyder served as city editor of the Omaha Republican and then as editor of the National Hotel and Travel Gazette.

Coming to Washington in 1895 as secretary to Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, he later became correspondent for the Omaha Bee, and in 1922 was appointed marshal by President Harding.

In the 1920 Presidential campaign Mr. Snyder served as chairman of the Republican speakers' bureau for Maryland, Virginia, and the District. In 1928 he was alternate delegate to the Republican convention, and in 1932 went to the Republican National Convention in Chicago as a delegate.

Both President Coolidge and President Hoover reappointed Mr. Snyder as marshal. Since his retirement in 1934 he had confined his activities to writing and participating in civic affairs.

Headed Gridiron, Alfalfa Clubs

In 1915 Mr. Snyder was elected presient of the Gridiron Club and was a past president of the Alfalfa Club. He was a thirty-third degree Mason, a member of the Kiwanis Club, National Press Club, Capitol Republican Club, Elks Club, former chairman of the taxation committee of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, first president of the Wilson Normal Community Center, chairman of the Advisory Council of White Community Centers in Washington, and held honorary memberships in Temple-Noyes Lodge, No. 32, and Almas Temple of the Shrine.

Mr. Snyder's wife, the former Emily Rose, of Philadelphia, to whom he was married in 1887, died here in 1935. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy De Muth Watson, and Mrs. Margery Snyder, both of this city.

Burial will be Friday in the Cedar Hill (Md.) Cemetery after cremation.

Taber Assails Farm Credit Bill

a stated differential sufficient to cover expenses and losses."

Farm credit policy also was debated yesterday before a Senate subcommittee, as four farm spokesmen urged passage of the Gillette bill. The measure would remove the FCA from the Department of Agriculture, where it was transferred by President Roosevelt's reorganization order, and place the agency under a bipartisan board, with members serving ten-year terms.

Merger of the FCA with the Agriculture Department creates a dangerous concentration of power in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture and governor of the FCA, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the banking and currency subcommittee.

"A truly cooperative organization must be independent," O'Neal said, "and a sound credit institution must be free from political distrubances of any kind."

Others who testified in favor of an independent FCA were J. Ralph Graham, president of the Eastern States Farmer's Exchange; R. C. Rich, former president of the National Wool Grower's Association, and Warren Hawley, of Batavia, N. Y.

Members of the House Agriculture Committee subjected Taber to sharp cross-examination.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, pointed out that the farm credit setup has undergone constant revision since 1933, describing the current legislation as part of "a steady process of growth."

"There is not a line in the bill that indicates loose or excessive credit," Jones asserted.

Taber asked the committee "just to hold a prayer meeting" over the sections of the bill which retire the capital stock of the land banks and end the present arrangement by which borrowers take 5 per cent of their loans in stock.

"I'm afraid we'll have a funeral first," replied Representative Flannagan (Democrat), of Virginia. "The present system just isn't working."

Taber said he had never seen such unanimity among National farm organizations as in their present opposition to the Jones-Wheeler bill and support for the Gillette bill.

Bell declined to say whether the Treasury Department would approve the Jones-Wheeler bill, if amended to fix interest rates at 3½ per cent, but he indicated his approval of several sections of the measure, including the full Treasury guarantee of Federal land bank bonds and dissolution of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

He saw possible "burdens on the Treasury," however, in the prohibition of deficiency judgments against land bank borrowers and the abolition of the requirement that borrowers take 5 per cent of their loans in land bank stock.

Felix Morley Is Named Haverford College President

partment of mathematics at the Johns Hopkins University, and it was from Friends School, Baltimore, in 1911, that Felix Morley entered Haverford. His two brothers, Christopher, the author, and Frank, now editorial director of Harcourt, Brace & Co., were also Haverfordians.

After entering Haverford as a student of engineering, Mr. Morley changed to the arts course and was graduated with high honors in English. Active in undergraduate activities, he was an editor of the college magazine as well as president of the student association and the college Y. M. C. A. In 1915 he won the Robert Browning Memorial verse award in a contest open to undergraduates of Pennsylvania colleges.

Three days after graduation at Haverford, Mr. Morley sailed for Europe with the late Edward Rice, jr., of the class of 1914, and joined the Friends Ambulance Service, attached to the British Red Cross. He served with this unit in northern France and Belgium for nearly a year, returning to the United States to start his newspaper career as a reporter on the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Early in 1917 he joined the staff of the United Press in Philadelphia and shortly thereafter was transferred to its Washington bureau. When the United States entered the war Mr. Morley enlisted in the first R. O. T. C. at Fort Myer and was later appointed to the staff of the Wartime Emergency Employment Service of the Department of Labor. After the armistice he was for nearly a year a Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American.

In the fall of 1919, Mr. Morley sailed for England to take up a Rhodes scholarship awarded from Maryland in 1916, but deferred because of the war. He received the B. A. degree in the Honors School of Modern History at Oxford in 1921, but remained in Europe for a third year, having been appointed to the Hutchinson Research Fellowship at the London School of Economics and Political Science. His research subject was "Unemployment Relief in Great Britain" and his book under that title, completed after Mr. Morley's return to the United States, received second prize in the Hart, Schaffner & Marx economic essay competition for 1924.

In August, 1922, Mr. Morley joined the editorial staff of the Baltimore Sun, remaining with that paper for six years. He was sent to the Far East by the Sun in 1925 and on his return, after a six-month sojourn in Japan, China and the Philippines, published a book entitled "Our Far Eastern Assignment," largely an expansion of articles written for that paper.

In 1928 Mr. Morley was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship to make a study of the organization and constitutional development of the League of Nations. During his stay at Geneva he also served as correspondent for the Baltimore Sun, resigning this connection in 1930 in order to complete the Geneva study. Following his resignation from the Baltimore Sun he organized and directed the Geneva office of the League of Nations Association of the United States.

FELIX MORLEY

In 1931 Mr. Morley returned from Geneva to join the staff of Brookings Institution in Washington and there completed his book on "The Society of Nations," published by the Brookings Institution in 1932.

Sir Eric Drummond, the first Secretary-General of the League, in a foreward which he wrote for this volume, called it "a valuable and permanent contribution" to literature on the League of Nations. The book, which is purely expository in nature, has been used as a textbook in a number of American universities and colleges.

In the fall of 1933, Mr. Eugene Meyer, who had bought The Washington Post a few months previous, asked Mr. Morley to assume charge of the editorial page of the paper. Mr. Morley became editor of The Post on December 18, 1933. In 1936 he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize "for distinguished editorial writing."

He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, of the Institute of Pacific Relations, of the American Political Science Association, of the Public Affairs Committee, of the Federal Advisory Council of the United States Employment Service, of the American Association of Newspaper Editors, of the Editorial Board of American Observer, of Phi Beta Kappa, and a Fellow the Royal Economic Society of Great Brtain. The degree of doctor of pholosophy was conferred upon him by the Brookings Institution in 1936.

Mr. Morley was married in Washington, on December 8, 1917, to Isabel Middleton, daughter of Jefferson Middleton, who for many years was connected with the United States Geological Survey. They have four children, the eldest of whom, Lorna Janet Morley, expects to enter Bryn Mawr College this year. A sister of Mrs. Morley is Mrs. John Herndon, wife of the Associate Professor of Government at Haverford.

Mr. Morley will start his duties at Haverford on September 1.

Swell "Youth Treatment:" Change oil for Spring

Better yet: Change to OIL-PLATING

What's worse than a late Winter? That's easy... the late Winter's oil still slopping around in your engine. Changing it now is true economy, and you'll see why you're a regular economy "shark" to change to OIL-PLATING at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station today.

All he does to give you an OIL-PLATED engine is to drain and then re-fill with Conoco Germ Processed oil—at a perfectly usual price. But here's what's extremely unusual: you simply start up and the costly man-made extra substance in this patented oil promptly begins bonding lubricant to engine parts—thoroughly—closely—like fine PLATING. That's your OIL-PLATING, which can't fly off, or drain down to the crankcase. This holds true through long stretches of time and distance...all-day runs...all-night stands. That's why OIL-PLATED bearings, and OIL-PLATED piston rings in OIL-PLATED cylinders can't even start a stroke unlubricated. The less of that harmful oil-starved starting, the less risk of a worn engine that over-eats oil. Change to OIL-PLATING today at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Takes no extra time. But it's an extra long time till you need your next quart of Germ Processed oil. Continental Oil Company

Cops And Kids

Surely the astonishing figures cited in connection with the boys' clubs program sponsored by the Metropolitan Police cannot be explained away as coincidence. They provide a succinct and sufficient reason why this program must be continued and extended.

In 1933, the year before this movement was launched, the number of boys arrested for serious infractions of the law was 353, an appalling figure. In 1938, the year in which the juvenile delinquency laws were revised to include youths up to 18 years, the number of arrests was 58. Meanwhile enrollments in the boys' clubs had grown to many thousands.

The predisposing factors of adolescent and preadolescent criminality have been established with almost scientific certitude. Almost every study of this sort has tended to emphasize the failure of strictly punitive measures in dealing with the problem. And the recognition of this failure by the police is one hopeful aspect of the otherwise ugly and disturbing story of the growth of crime in America.

Over some factors which have encouraged juvenile delinquency in Washington and other large cities—bad housing, economic insecurity, instable family circumstances, for example—the police have, of course, no control. They are, however, making an effort to offset the handicaps imposed by such conditions, by diverting adolescent energies into constructive channels.

Indeed the continuation of these clubs is of the utmost importance not only to the boys concerned but also to the education of the police themselves. The clubs are in a sense laboratories in which the policeman can learn something of the social and psychological implications of his job.

In short, the boys' clubs are one of the most notable accomplishments of Maj. Brown's administration. If Washingtonians familiarize themselves with this work, there will be no lack of funds to continue it through another year.

Check To Complacency

The Rockefeller Foundation is an institution which knows no boundaries of race, ereed or nationality in bestowing its benefactions. And nobody realizes more keenly the disruptive effects of war than the men who guide the activities of this organization, engaged in fostering public-health activities and in furthering the progress of the medical, social and natural sciences at home and abroad.

In reviewing the work of the Foundation during the past year, Raymond B. Fosdick, its president, has taken occasion to stress the dependence of this country upon Europe for "stimulation and intellectual leadership in relation to many segments of our intellectual and cultural activity." It is a timely reminder, which should help to check a very dubious complacency as to our own achievements.

Viewing the chaos in Europe we realize the handicaps under which students of the arts and sciences are laboring there today. From that contemplation, it is easy to proceed to a smug acceptance of our favored position and a wholly unjustified confidence in our ability to carry forward the work that foreign intellectuals have been compelled, temporarily at least, to abandon.

Dr. Fosdick does not hesitate to shatter any illusions of superiority that may have been fostered by our favored situation. He points out that five of the six Nobel prizes awarded in science last year went to Europe; only one to the United States. He mentions many fields of research in which leadership remains with Europe and warns that suspension, even for five years, of the work that is being done in European universities and laboratories would affect the intellectual life of this country "immediately and disastrously."

It is a truism that "the creative spirit of man cannot successfully be localized or nationalized." But it is also one of those obvious truths that many men forget when political strife distorts judgment and impedes clear thinking. Dr. Fosdick well says that the "fundamental unity of modern civilization is the unity of intellectual life." Intellectual separatism is even more costly and damaging to a people, from the long-time point of view, than the economic separatism of which we hear so much.

Impartial Prosecution

Attorney General Jackson has set a high standard of performance for Federal prosecuting attorneys. If the instructions he gave to the second annual Conference of United States Attorneys are carried out, prosecutors for the Federal Government will assume much of the dignity, impartiality and prestige that now characterize judges on the bench.

"The prosecutor," said Mr. Jackson, "has more control over life, liberty and reputation than any other person in America." He can have citizens investigated, present cases to the grand jury or dismiss them before trial. Since Federal laws are numerous and offenses against them total many times the number that prosecutors can handle, they must pick their cases. That discretion gives them tremendous power.

It was no exaggeration, then, for Mr. Jackson to say that, "while the prosecutor at his best is one of the most beneficent forces in our society, when he acts from malice or other base motives, he is one of the worst." United States attorneys are expected to be not only diligent, strict and vigorous in enforcement of the law, but also fair, reasonable and just. "Although the Government technically loses its case," the Attorney General said, "it has really won if justice has been done."

That point cannot be too emphatically impressed upon our law-enforcement agencies. Too often prosecutors have used their office to build up records of convictions. That attitude tempts them to seek victims rather than truth and justice. In the past, prosecution of this type has been encouraged by use of these key positions in the Federal law-enforcement system as political rewards.

Mr. Jackson expressed gratification that Federal prosecutors have been prohibited by the Hatch Act from engaging in poltical activities. He asked them to accept the spirit and letter of the law in good faith—to use it as a protection against demands upon their time and influence for partisan activities. That sensible advice also leads to the hope that the Department of Justice will hereafter recommend for the postion of district attorney only those qualified by professional ability and experience as distinguished from party service.

The precautions requested by Mr. Jackson for the protection of civil liberties and avoidance of any encroachment upon State functions are particularly timely. When emotions are strained, prosecutors sometimes fail to draw the line between overt acts of a subversive nature and the mere expression of unpopular opinions. So the Attorney General asks "extreme care" to protect the spirit as well as the letter of our civil liberties.

Prosecutors are expected courageously to enforce the law without fear of or favor to local politicians. At the same time Mr. Jackson warns them against "entanglements with local politics," and against exerting over local affairs indirect influence that would be unlawful if exerted directly.

The Attorney General has laid down an excellent code for prosecutors. Its application should usher in a new era of enlightened and impartial enforcement of the law.

Economic Offensive

In his speech before the House of Commons yesterday, Premier Chamberlain was careful not to reveal much about Allied plans in the way of carrying the war to Germany. But he said enough to indicate that what the British and French leaders have in mind at this time is an economic rather than a military offensive.

Should the Allies succeed in plugging up existing loopholes in the blockade, the long-range effect on Germany will certainly prove serious. But the immediate impact of such intensified war of economic attrition would be felt even more by the neutrals whose borders adjoin those of the Third Reich.

Already the plight of many of these small nations, wedged in between the opposing belligerents, is serious. It now promises to become even more so. For there is every reason to believe that Allied pressure to curtail their trade with Germany will be countered by German pressure exerted for an opposite end. The only saving grace, so far as these small nations are concerned, is that the Allies have no desire to invade their territory or destroy their independence, while such action by Germany would, in the long run, handicap rather than help the aggressor.

Rumania is a case in point. Germany is extremely anxious to get a larger percentage of that country's food and oil exports. Berlin is holding a thinly veiled threat of aggression over that Balkan kingdom. But if such an invasion were followed, as is probable, by the destruction of Rumania's oil wells, Germany would lose far more than she could possibly gain by the venture. For that and similar reasons, present German policy vis-a-vis Rumania, and for that matter towards all other neighboring neutrals as well, is to rely on cajolery and intimidation alone.

Yet, even ignoring Allied counter-pressure on those countries, there are many obstacles which make it difficult for Germany to use the neutrals to fill the gaps in her own production. Rumanian mobilization, for instance, has tended to curtail agricultural production at the very moment when, from the German point of view, an exportable surplus of foodstuffs is most essential.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why Germany is urging the Bucharest government to send at least 500,000 men now under arms back to their villages. It is equally understandable that Rumania is loath to do so.

Help Make It Accurate

Now that census enumerators are in the field, the controversy over some of the questions they are asking should quickly subside. Senator Tobey has fought a losing fight. He has failed to convince either the Census Bureau or the Senate that any question should be eliminated. The sportsmanlike course for him to take is to recognize his defeat and cooperate to make the census a success.

Many citizens believe that some of the 1940 census questions probe too deeply into private affairs. Various groups would like to have had several different queries eliminated. Other groups sought to have additional questions added. Obviously it was impossible for the Census Bureau to satisfy everyone.

Most of the objections to census questions have been found to be unwarranted. Careful students of government have been little impressed with the argument that the enumeration involves an invasion of civil rights. But in any event the time for protest or complaint has passed. Secretary Hopkins has sent the enumerators forth with instructions to make the census a "cooperative enterprise" and not an inquisition. It is the duty of every citizen to respond to the questions asked in like spirit.

No one appears to have questioned the value of the census as a whole. It is generally recognized that the success of this vast undertaking is vital to the welfare of the country. It will provide information of the greatest importance to the Government, business, labor, social workers, students and various other groups. No patriotic citizen will attempt to sabotage an enterprise that is so closely related to the national welfare.

Because of the numerous and diversified questions that are being asked, the taking of an accurate and complete census will be a difficult task at best. The cooperation of every family will be necessary to make it a success. There is every reason to believe that such cooperation can be freely given without fear that confidential information will be exposed to promiscuous examination or put to improper use.

The Moral Embargo

Secretary Hull will have overwhelming public support in his decision, apparently conveyed to Ambassador Oumansky yesterday, to continue the moral embargo against the shipments of airplanes and their equipment to Russia.

Having forced her will upon Finland, Russia is momentarily at peace. But there is no certainty that this condition will continue. And lifting of the embargo would hardly operate to discourage the Kremlin from indulging in any further aggression which may be contemplated.

There is neither point nor purpose, therefore, in treating Russia as in a different category from Germany and Japan, two other countries against which the moral embargo has been and continues to be employed.

If this restraint was desirable when the conquest of Finland was begun it is equally in order now and in the future. The sacrifices accepted by the little Baltic democracy do not cleanse the Russian record of an enduring stain.

Bombs From The Sun

From the Christian Science Monitor.

"No communication with Europe." . . . "Magnetic disturbances beyond our control have delayed this telegram . . ." "I'm sorry, Miss Boston, but I haven't been able to put through your Chicago call; I hope to have a clear line for you soon." Thus did radio, telegraph, and telephone companies report the results of the sun's Sunday attack on the earth's electrical communications.

Astronomers and engineers have much to learn about solar cyclones which, although nearly 93,000,000 miles away, set up electrical currents not only in the air but in the earth itself. And mankind, seeking to find a material cause by study of strange effects and not understanding the mental storms that sweep the world today, has much to learn about the whole subject of magnetism. Whether or not there is another bombardment, as the astronomers predict, the phenomena must provoke serious reflections.

If the physical scientists trace these phenomena back to a material cause, how will they then discover the cause of that cause? Are men, by developing devices which shrink the earth and even the universe, rendering themselves more vulnerable to forces they do not understand? Were the sun to increase its bombing of earth, would men cease their bombing of each other in mutual efforts at self-defense from a larger danger? When they see the need of overcoming the forces which are disintegrating civilization, men will be freer to cope with disruptive physical phenomena.

Curtain Of History

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a Virginian, and wholly in favor of the English-French ideals, as distinguished from the German totalitarian animalism. We Southerners, who were conquered, learned a bitter lesson. Economic law is the final arbiter in a long-drawn-out struggle, and the changes in warfare at this date make it more certain that disregard for economic law (God's law) means death for a nation which has reached a stagnant condition where they have lost the power to change. Change is the law of life, and compromise gives life to a nation.

The British Empire is standing in the way of progress, just as the Confederate States did, and even though they have ideals, and a noble tradition behind them, they must obey God's law. History shows that many times before civilizations have gone down before the attack of barbarians. Hold on to your ideals as a part of your soul, but open your mind to the new evangel of economic freedom.

Henry George, William Jennings Bryan, Dr. Townsend, with the bitter and relentless ghost of Karl Marx, who started the world-unrest, stand behind the curtain of history, which may rise at any moment. EDMOND FONTAINE.

"A Lesson In Manners

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for your frank editorial entitled "A Lesson in Manners" in The Post of March 20.

Sometimes I am almost suffocated by the insufferable smugness of my dear fellow-countrymen who (temporarily bereft of characteristic American courage) hide under their beds while there is a free fight going on over principles in which they profess to believe, and indulge in captious criticism of those upstanding defenders of democracy, but for whom their hideouts would become their graves.

Your editorial was a blessed breather. It freshens up my faith that American courage is not as dead as it appears to be. It strengthens my refusal to believe that we Americans are really and fundamentally cowards; that we have decided to accept cowardice as a permanent national policy; that we are ready to substitute for "Oh, say, do you see" Little Orphant Annie's "An' the gobble-uns 'll git you, ef you don't watch out."

Pity us, ye brave, who blazed the democratic trail which we in this bad moment hesitate to defend.

National Program

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is no wonder that Mayor LaGuardia disposed of the principal Republican aspirants for the Presidency with the brief but expressive comment: "Phooey!"

While all of them are vociferous in carping and condemnation of the Democratic Admistration, none offers any national program that is more progressive or humanitarian. True, the various G. O. P. hopefuls declaim loudly that they want America to stay out of foreign wars.

The nation emphatically agrees with them on that score, but the fact remains that under the Democratic Administration, which these hopefuls assail so assiduously, we are still at peace. There is certainly no assurance that a Republican regime, inspired very probably by the reactionary philosophy of Herbert Hoover, would do any better job in this respect.

The long, tedious and fiercely resisted struggle to make law and government really instruments for protecting human rights must go on under any Administration. That fight can be continued more successfully, in all probability, under a Democratic than under a Republican executive and Congress—even after acknowledging that the Democratic Party contains some tories as archaic in their reasoning, as vulpine in their tactics, and as vicious in their aims as any in opposition ranks. Grammar

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This letter is not about Miss Gibbon, but about the English language in the United States.

In the last sentence of the letter by L. D. W. we find "It behooves every (singular) loyal supporter . . . to bend their (plural) efforts unitedly to effect a change in the administration." The sentence tells its own story.

In the letter to which L. D. W. refers we find "The faculty (singular) do (plural) not dare to speak out for their (what is the antecedent?) livelihoods (?), etc.

Is this the type of English construction to which the young people of this community are being trained? LOIS CHRISTENSEN.

"Our Town In Pictures"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your church survey section in The Post of March 31 interested me not a little. With all the activities known to man receiving attention and publicity, it is fine that you include those things which would add to his spiritual stature if he would take advantage of them.

Particularly do I love the part devoted to Mrs. Abernetny, of Calvary Baptist Church. To be a member of her class is to understand why that group delights in making life less bleak for so many people in so many parts of the world. Mrs. Abernethy is so given over to practical, spiritual beauty that she imparts a desire for it to any person to whom she talks.

May I suggest—and quite seriously—that some Sunday morning at 9:30, if you find yourself wanting something stimulating to do, you make your way to Calvary Church, ask for the Burral Class, and listen to what goes on there. The fact that it is a woman's class need not deter you—plenty of men have been mightily uplifted by what they have heard there. Listen to what Mrs. Abernethy has to say, and I know that you will agree she is one of the world's most beautiful and helpful women.

I am glad to find the really worthwhile and interesting things in The Post which are appearing there these days.

Adam's Fall

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The newspaper announcement that the Catholic Church will in its revision of biblical interpretation, exonerate Eve and place the blame of the "fall" on Adam solely, suggests that it is time for revision to go much farther.

In a kindergarten age of the world, men might have taken literally the terms "Adam" and "Eve" as denoting actual persons; but it is scarcely thinkable that this sort of personalizing of abstract objects or supposed human beings should continue to be preached from pulpits. The Hebrew term, "adam" written in capitals or otherwise, is interchangeable in its meaning, as "man," "earth" or "Adam."

It means no more than Man was created of material elements. He comes from things material and goes back to that from which he came. His spiritual life is something apart, as we believe; but this capacity for spiritual receptivity and development came long after man had emerged from an age-long primitive condition. There was no historian to note when an "Adam" took on the form of conscious Man.

There is no more unreason in man's emergence, in slow processes, from a lower type, in which existed incipient or potential civilized man, than in William Pitt, 5 days old, displaying not as much intelligence as a kitten that old, but at 25 ruling the British Empire. William Pitt, 5 days old, had in him potentially but undeveloped the man he became at 25.

So an "Adam," (who he was or what he was like, we do not know, save as our museums give us hints), had in him embryonically the future being we now call the "lord of creation." And the "fall" was not from the first man's tasting forbidden fruit, but comes of every man's fleshly tendencies to lust after the things which drive him from Eden—which is that state of spiritual union with God. Each man is his own "Adam," and the "fall" is individual and not the result of any one man's act millions of years ago.

Payments To The Unemployed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson's following are perhaps to be congratulated that she has left for Europe, presumably to explore a field in which she is better fitted to express ideas than the field of employment statistics.

In her "Last Word" she states:

"Might I remind you that not a cent has been paid to the unemployed out of taxes, but that all that has gone to them has gone by increasing the public debt? Also that the du Ponts have advocated balancing the budget, which would undoubtedly mean an increase and not a diminishing of taxation?"

Miss Thompson apparently is unaware that, according to a statement published by the Social Security Board through December, 1939, over $825,000,000 was paid by the States to the unemployed as benefits.

During the same period over one and a half billion dollars was raised by pay-roll taxes for this express purpose. (The fact that the Unemployment Trust Fund is invested in Government obligations has no significance in this connection, because these particular obligations are not sold to the public in order to enable the Government to make payments to the States as needed for unemployment benefits.)

Miss Thompson is also apparently unaware that all moneys collected by the United States Government, whether from taxation or from borrowing or from other sources, go into the general fund of the Treasury and lose their identity. It is, therefore, only by arbitrarily relating Government receipts to Government expenditures that it can be said that payments to the unemployed for direct relief or through WPA are made out of borrowed money.

No one who has given any thought to the fiscal situation of the Government will take exception to Miss Thompson's statement that balancing the budget would undoubtedly mean an increase of taxation. If we are to work toward a balancing of the budget, it means that we will have to face the unpleasant task of both reducing Government expenditures and increasing taxes.

However, the present temper of the American people, especially those representing industry, is to resist tax increases. Perhaps the du Ponts are an exception to this general attitude.

A Man's Job

Radio announcement from London:

"Women are beginning to appear as bus and cab drivers."

If Englishwomen in any way resemble their sisters in France the London public, or what is left of it, is in for some entertaining experiences. What every woman knows is that woman's greatest charm is her unpredictableness. You cannot fit the average woman into a pattern. As soon as you have her outlines neatly chalked out she makes an unexpected movement and your tidy diagram is ruined.

Women therefore do not do men's work as men do it. I am not saying that they do it better or worse, only that they do it differently. I know, for I have watched them, in Paris in the ancient days of 1918. Long years have passed since then, but I am sure that women have not yet acquired conformity.

I remember, I am not likely to forget, a trip by tram I took in Paris in the autumn of 1917. As I got on, a boy friend was talking to the girl conductor. I do not know how long they had known each other, but when their acquaintance came to my notice it was making rapid progress.

They soon started to discuss the pros and cons of matrimony, not in any personal way, just in general, but there is a saying to the effect that talking about love is making love. Of course the French can be pretty funny about marriage, and these two found each other's remarks exceedingly witty. Their peals of laughter reached the ears of the motorwoman, who grew more and more interested and kept turning her head to watch the two in the middle of the car.

At last she opened the door behind her and began shouting witticisms of her own. It is true that she kept her hands on the wheel, but she had turned her head almost completely around, the car was full of people, and we were going at a good rate down a crowded Paris street. Luckily, before we crushed any women or children or crashed into a truck the young man found the motorman the more entertaining of the two and joined her on the front platform.

It was not nearly so nerve-wracking to have the conductress continually leaving her post to skip up the car, put her head through the door and shout jests at the other two. Being a Frenchwoman I am sure that she also managed to collect all the fares. No, I will be more accurate and amend that to "being a woman," for no matter what our vagaries my sisters are always practical.

On another tram we stopped in front of a car barn. A man who was apparently some kind of superintendent got on and took that moment to reprove our conductress. At first she defended herself with spirit, but at last the inevitable happened and she burst into tears.

The rest of our trip was distinctly melancholy as the conductress wandered up and down the car demanding: "Vos places, m'siers, 'dames, in a voice choked with weeping. Her muffled sobs and not so muffled sniffles were still continuing as I left the tram, though again I am convinced, her emotion did not prevent her collecting the proper fares.

Watching women do men's work was not always so funny. A very fat man lugging a huge kit bag came into my apartment on a train. With much difficulty he hoisted his bag into the rack, where it swayed above our heads more like a 10-ton truck than the proverbial sword. The train having started, the fat man tilted his straw hat over his eyes and composed himself for sleep.

But Puck himself must have been in that hat, as every time that its owner was just off it would slide rapidly down his nose and wake him up. He was a persistent soul, however, and replacing his headgear at what he hoped was a more secure angle he would settle himself again. His hopes were never justified; at his first deep breath the hat would slip and the owner awake. Finally even the persistent one gave it up, and with a sigh took off his hat and placed it on the rack.

Then he took out a little book and began to read. He was very large and very fat and very red, and the book was very small and very pink, being liberally sprinkled with rosebuds. After an hour or so he was apparently approaching his destination, for he got up, slipped the little book into his pocket, and with some difficulty pulled the great bag off the rack and hauled it into the corridor, where he disappeared.

He returned shortly, followed by the conductress to whom he indicated his bag. She was small and delicately made, but of course, she could make no protest. I shall never forget the picture of that frail girl, bent beneath the weight of his bag, struggling after him as he strode down the corridor. I longed to shout to him: "Maybe if you were not such a fat pig you would not have to read little books on how to be happy."

Gangsters And Unions

IN THIS ESSAY and in others I will sketch the outline of the criminal mafia which is operating under charters from the American Federation of Labor. This is a gang descended from the old Capone mob, and its connection with the new Capone mob will be inferred rather than demonstrated. The FBI could fill in the picture, but Government bureaus are afraid to engage in operations which might offend either the A. F. of L or the C. I. O., and the details will not be produced out of the Government files until some committee of Congress demands them. In this respect criminals who have burrowed into the labor movement enjoy immunity, even a protection, not granted to legitimate, taxpaying citizens. The income tax returns of law-abiding men are supposed to be inviolate, but many have been made public by executive order of the President as a means of harassing political opponents of the New Deal. Criminal records and background are secret, too, and this secrecy is scrupulously maintained even to the extent of protecting hoodlums who have muscled into the labor racket.

It has already been shown that the labor racket in the amusement industry, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, is dominated by two crooks under the nominal presidency of a stooge.

THESE CRIMINALS are Willie Bioff, the old Capone gangster, and Nick Circella, another Chicago hoodlum, both of whom were appointed to their jobs by George Browne, the International president, who is high in the councils of the national body of the A. F. of L.

Incidentally, to the foul record of Bioff, the vicemonger, may now be added the fact that the tickets for a de luxe cruise on the Normandie which he enjoyed in the winter of 1938, price $3,700, were paid for by a man with whom Bioff conducted negotiations ostensibly on behalf of the rank and file.

The story of the Bioff-Circella-Browne union in Chicago is one of bombings, extortion, oppression and murder. The crooks rose to power by methods reminiscent of Mussolini, Hitler and Capone, without any vote by the union rank and file. They just muscled in. Many union members have written me letters and some personal acquaintances among the membership have told me confidentially that they just pay and rarely go to meetings, and on those rare occasions sit quiet, because they know that if they protest they will be outlawed from their occupations and, not improbably, beaten up or murdered.

The Building Service Employes' Union, another Chicago racket with an international charter from the A. F. of L., is dominated by George Scalise, of Brooklyn, an old prohibition mobster and panderer. Scalise is an associate of Little Augie Carfano, alias Pisano, who, in turn, is related by marriage to the Tammany politician known as Jimmy Kelly, or Elephant Ears.

LITTLE AUGIE and Kelly hang around race tracks and are conspicuous at the horse yard in Miami, known as Tropical Park. Little Aug has been arrested many times, thrice on gun charges, but apparently has not been convicted. Kelly has political power in New York, where he recently was elected Tammany leader of the Second Assembly District.

Scalise did four years under the Mann Act for pandering. He muscled into his job as president of the union at $20,000 a year, plus unlimited expenses, out of an annual income, or lug, of approximately $300,000. He may draw down the entire $300,000 for personal expenses. And, recently, when he went down to Miami to confer with William Green he paid $20 a day out of the union treasury for his room in a hotel where one of his organizers discovered that chambermaids were caring for upward of 20 rooms a day for $13 a week. Chambermaids are among the toilers whose initiation fees, dues and assessments provide Scalise with his $20,000 a year and unlimited expenses.

Scalise's local unions in New York are positively crawling with criminals in many of the key positions. I have checked a dozen myself by the laborious process of going to court records. The FBI probably could reveal other criminals in the official list.

The Census Man

Scene: The White House

Q. Is this place owned or rented?
A. If I'm paying rent it's just another mistake.

Q. What is the name of each person whose usual place of residence is here?
A. I'll have to get you a list.
Q. Are there any children here?
A. At times I think there is nobody else.
Q. Does Mrs. Roosevelt reside here?
A. Well, you could hardly call it her usual place of residence.
Q. What is your marital status?
A. I'm married, but separated by all known forms of transportation.
Q. Are you employed for pay or profit on non-emergency work?
A. I hope you wouldn't classify being President in a time like this as non-emergency work.
Q. Are you seeking any work?
A. Well, I'm a little undecided about what to do for the next four years.

Q. What was your last previous occupation?
A. I had a job in Albany, N. Y.
Q. What kind of work was it?
A. Looking back and making comparisons, it was pretty soft.
Q. For what reason did you give up that job?
A. I wanted to try something bigger.
Q. Did you succeed in so doing?
A. I'll say I did!

Q. Do you own a radio?
A. Yes, but I've put it in the cellar until Dewey's speaking tour ends.
Q. Is this house in need of repairs?
A. Well, I'm satisfied from some of the newspaper yarns that are appearing that there must be some big leaks around here.
Q. Have you a bathtub or shower with running water?
A. Certainly.
Q. Are they adequate?
A. They're adequate except when Republicans are living here.
Q. This building is heated with hot air, is it not?
A. No; you're thinking of the previous administration.

Q. How much income did you have last year? Was it over $5,000?
A. It was.
Q Did you profit from your radio talks?
A. I won't know until after the next election.

Q. How many weeks did you work last year?
A. I worked every week last year. And that goes for all those times I was on the water, too! Be sure to put that down. I want the Republicans to know it.
Q. Have you served in any war or wars?
A. If you think I've just been on a picnic for the last eight years, you're crazy.

Q. I think that is all. Where can I locate Mrs. Roosevelt?
A. You're asking me!

Voteless Millions

By Ernest Lindley

The Poll Tax Protest

LIBERAL SOUTHERNERS are seeking the aid of the Federal Government in freeing eight Southern States from the poll taxes which effectively disenfranchise, or facilitate the complete control of, several million citizens.

Practically, the exercise of Federal power seems necessary because repeal of the poll taxes by the States is difficult to the verge of impossibility. Every State which was able to get rid of the poll tax by simple legislative action has already done so. In the eight remaining States, with the possible exception of Tennessee, where the sanction is cloudy, the poll tax has been frozen into the State constitution. The power to prevent constitutional amendments lies with the politicians and interests whose security rests upon a restricted franchise. Two years ago, in Arkansas, about 8 per cent of the citizens of voting age were able to block an amendment abolishing the poll tax.

Legally, the appeal to Federal power is based on the broad ground that the sovereignty of the Federal Government is impaired by a State tax upon a Federal franchise.

The attack has been launched on two fronts. One is in Congress, through the Geyer bill, on which hearings are now being held. This bill would prohibit the levying of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting or registering to vote in Federal elections. The other is through the Pirtle case, soon to be argued in the Circuit Courtof Appeals.

PIRTLE—Henry Pirtle—is a white man from a Tennessee mountain county. Being otherwise qualified, he has requested a judgment declaring that he was entitled to vote for a member of Congress, despite the fact that he had not paid his poll tax. Two years ago the Supreme Court upheld the poll tax in the somewhat similar Breedlove case. But since then the composition of the court has changed, and the Pirtle case is based less on Pirtle's right to vote than on the right of the Federal Government to have the benefit of his vote in a Federal election.

Both lines of attack have been launched by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, backed by such nationally respected Southerners as Frank P Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Maury Maverick, Mayor of San Antonio, Tex.; and Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal. Basic rights are involved, penetrating far below the surface of the Constitution.

The race question is involved, although probably more emotionally than as a practical matter. Excepting Mississippi and South Carolina, more white voters than Negroes are effectively disenfranchised by the poll tax, according to reputable analysts. South Carolina, incidentally, is the only one of the eight States which does not make the poll tax a prerequisite to voting in the primaries, where the real contests in the Democratic South usually occur.

But the Negroes in South Carolina are prevented from voting in other ways. On the other hand, in Tennessee, where other methods of restraining the Negroes are not used, the poll tax does not seem to be a barrier to widespread exercise of the franchise by Negroes. In Memphis the Negro vote is largely controlled by "Boss" Crump, and is commonly regarded as an important factor in preserving his power.

MOST OF THE PRESENT poll taxes were enacted during the period of Populist unrest. While the emotions surrounding race supremacy were mobilized to bring about their adoption, discerning Southern observers have asserted that one of the main purposes, if not the primary one, was to preserve political control in the hands of the conservative, property-owning classes. Anyway, the poll tax keeps the vote from white men as well as Negroes. In some States it is cumulative. In Alabama if you want to cast your vote at the age of 45, you have to pay the tax for 24 years at $1.50 a year before you are eligible. For citizens of low income such a sum is prohibitive. Considering the abysmal poverty of parts of the Old South, the tax is almost prohibitive even where it is not cumulative.

It is not prohibitive, of course, for candidates with well-heeled backers. It is more or less common knowledge that in some States and sections votes are mustered and controlled by paying poll taxes for citizens who could not or would not pay them from their own pockets.

The whole country has an interest in this effort to abolish poll taxes in Federal elections, because of the immense authority wielded by the Senators and Representatives from the poll-tax States. These eight States provide the chairman of five of the of the 12 most important committees in the House, and five of the 11 comparable committees in the Senate.

Not all the Senators and Representatives from the poll-tax States are reactionaries, by any means. Alabama, for example, has probably the most oppressive poll tax. But one of its Senators is liberal and the other is no further to the right than the middle of the road. In a one-party South, continuity in office, and the rise, by seniority, to influence in Congress probably would remain more frequent than in other parts of the country, even if poll taxes were abolished. But the broadening of the franchise should have a leavening effect. To fail to broaden it, while professing adherence to the principles of democracy, is pure hypocrisy.

SENATOR BANKHEAD

Nobody, says Mr. Lindley, could justly accuse him of being reactionary, yet the citizens of his State probably suffer more than any others from poll-tax oppression

The Greatest Development Of The War

WHEN THE HISTORY of our troubled times comes to be written, the war which has been raging in Europe these past seven months may be completely overshadowed by one of its incidental developments.

The exigencies of the common struggle against a resourceful, powerful and unscrupulous foe has tended to draw Great Britain and France together to a degree never before achieved by those countries or any other wartime allies. During these seven months the two nations have learned to think and act and almost to feel as one and not merely in the military sphere but in the realm of finance and economics as well.

The present war began, as the last war ended, with unity of command established between the French and British armies, the French and British fleets. The sphere of cooperation was almost immediately widened to include such vital matters as exchange, shipping and the purchase of war supplies in neutral countries. It is now being extended into the field of production. But the most striking thing about these cooperative efforts is that neither in Great Britain nor in France is it assumed that they are war measures alone, to be dropped after victory has been achieved. On the contrary, the universal assumption in both countries is that they will be continued into the peace that will follow this war.

THIS IS MORE than wishful thinking or banquet hyperbole.

The belief, amounting to a certainty, that Anglo-French cooperation will survive the end of the war arises out of the realization in both countries that their destinies are now irrevocably linked because the weakness of each can only be overcome by the strength of both.

Hitler may be overthrown; the Nazi regime may be replaced by a government with which Great Britain and France can get along, but it is doubtful if any Englishmen or any Frenchmen of the present generation will ever be convinced that what happened during the 20 years following the World War armistice will not happen again.

To keep the peace that will follow the present war will necessitate the unbroken cooperation of the two western democracies, particularly since, whatever may happen to Germany, Great Britain and France are certain to emerge from the present struggle weaker rather than stronger.

WE HAVE BEFORE us in what Great Britain and France are doing what may prove to be the embryo of a European federation. The League of Nations failed because it accentuated rather than limited the sovereignty of its members. Already it can be said that the period between 1918 and 1938 was the period when the concept of sovereignty achieved its widest application. But today that concept has less and less meaning for more and more nations.

The totalitarian nations do not even bother to render it lip service. The fact that China is sovereign both by definition and by treaty has not stopped Japan from waging war on that country, lopping off rich provinces and setting up puppets, such as Wang Chingwei, to rule on the island empire's behalf.

Nor did the concept of sovereignty deter Mussolini from destroying Ethiopia and Albania or invading Spain, Hitler from laying violent hands on Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, or Russia from invading Finland and making vassals of the Baltic republics.

WE ALREADY have in Europe and Asia the beginnings and more than the beginnings of an international feudal system with small nations, when not swallowed up, given protection by predatory great powers in return for the acceptance of a vassal status. Slovakia, the Baltic republics, the so-called Gouvernement General of Poland which the Nazis have set up in the conquered area suggest the fate of all small nations in Europe and Asia if totalitarianism triumphs.

But it must not be imagined that an Allied victory would mean the restoration of the concept of sovereignty as it was practiced in the halcyon days after the World War. Certainly what is going on in France and Great Britain suggests that a new concept is in process of being born.

In pooling their strength the Allies are subordinating the concept of sovereignty to that of community and cooperation. And should this new concept survive the war, as it will if the Allies are victorious, the Anglo-French combination will unquestionably exert a magnetic pull on nations within their economic and financial orbit.

But that is in the future. For the present it is enough to notice that together Great Britain and France have planted a great seed in the soil of history.

Reflections On Passing Gibraltar

War-Time Musings Of An American Traveler

By Dorothy Thompson.

Aboard S. S. Manhattan.

ON AN AMERICAN SHIP one realizes what neutrality means in the warring world of 1940. This ship is American territory, but once away from our own coast we live on the terms of one or another of the belligerents.

We are not making for the usual peace-time Atlantic ports because the waters are infested with German-laid mines and German submarines. Inferentially we admit the right of the Germans to sink our ships on sight and drown every one on board. We admit it by avoiding the issue.

We have a cargo of copper, oil and lots of other things, among them needles and thread. It is consigned to Genoa. But the Americans who shipped the material can not sell it wherever they wish. Much of the cargo is shipped under "navicerts"—naval certificates issued by the British guaranteeing that the goods will not go to Germany.

At Gibraltar this morning the British came on board and looked over all the cargo "manifests." Were we carrying contraband likely to get to Germany we would be forced into a British port and there compelled to unload it. Every pound of copper and drop of oil transported on this ship will be traced by the British after it is unloaded. If its destination is not neutral or Allied territory, the shipper and consignee will go on a British black list, and no American ship will care to carry cargo from that source again, for to carry it will mean expense and delay.

BRITISH OFFICIALS this morning questioned all our German passengers, mostly elderly women returning from visits to children in America. The American-born wife of a German going to join him came in for some fairly careful questioning about her political views. She was quiet and noncommittal. The officials were pleasant, found nobody suspicious and treated the Germans and ogling passengers with great courtesy. But at Gibraltar we unloaded all mail destined for Germany, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. All of it will be gone over and opened by the British censors. If there is money in it it will be removed, and letters will be searched for espionage information and for bills of lading of "front" organizations set up to escape the embargo. Thus, by rifling the American mails, have the British helped to compile their black lists of "enemy" firms operating from the United States.

A French submarine was right alongside of us as we hove to at Gibraltar, that barren rock that is Britain's most valuable bit of real estate. A bystander said, wryly: "If the commander of that sub should tell us to get off in ten minutes because he was going to sink the ship, I suppose we'd obey!"

WE HAVE no sound or logical ground for protesting the right of the Allies to superintend and control every needle and spool of American thread to a European friend.

These encounters with the British and French are repeated, whereas we have no annoying conflicts with the Germans. We have no conflicts wiht the Germans because the German method of enforcing an embargo is simply to send the ship, with all on board, to the bottom. So we stay entirely out of the range of that possibility, and close not only the Allied, but all the neutral ports of Scandinavia, Belgium and Holland to our ships.

Our trade as a whole is not suffering. On the contrary, with France buying ten times her normal quota of goods in the United States, with British buying increased and with a thriving market for our raw materials and manufactured goods in all the neutral countries, our trade is at a peak. But it is a curious thing to realize that our foreign trade is today controlled in one way or another by warring powers.

The Germans have complained bitterly since 1918 that they were betrayed by Woodrow Wilson's 14 points. One of these points was "the freedom of the seas in war as in peace." Freedom of the seas in peace or in war was one of the things we fought the last war about. Well, we did not get it. Nobody took it away from us. They probably would have done so, but we did not wait to see, nor did we argue it. We abandoned the principle itself, in the neutrality act.

THERE ARE about 30 of some 300 or 400 members of American Medical Clubs of Scotland on board. These are American students, mostly Jewish, who have been studying medicine in Edinburgh and Glasgow, chiefly because the quota system imposed upon Jewish students by American medical schools has made it impossible for them to get an education in their own country. We also have our modified version of Hitler's racial laws, only they are not enforced by the state but in a silent and unpublicized manner by our so-called free universities.

These young men, who have completed anywhere from one to three years of their courses in the Scottish universities, came home on vacation last summer. Now they have been refused their passports to return. Great Britain is willing to have them, but our Department of State will not allow them to return to a belligerent country. Nor—according to the story of the group on this ship—was it possible for them to find a place for themselves.

The more enterprising of them have set out for Switzerland with a view to continuing their studies in Lausanne, but the prospect dismays them because none of them speaks French, and to resume a medical education in the middle in a completely foreign language is a hard test.

It is a curious phenomenon that American students should have to search out foreign universities in a warring world in order to be allowed to learn how to deliver a baby or set bones or bind up wounds. Nor can they understand why they are not permitted to return to Britain to place themselves at the disposal of the British government for Red Cross work when other young Americans do get passports to permit them to travel to France to drive ambulances.

COMMODORE A. B. RANDALL

Some Troubles Of S. S. Manhattan's Passengers

I don't know the answer, I'm sure.

TONIGHT WAS the Captain's dinner and a gala night. We wore paper hats, blew up balloons, drank champagne and danced a little, but the affair lacked the spirit of carnival. In the midst of the caviar, the American wife returning to her German husband rejoiced in the discovery of vitamins in capsules. She was taking back boxes of them to compensate for butter. A French officer drew sketches of tanks on the tablecloth and expressed his considered opinion that the French and British could win the war.

"There is one great improvement in this war over the last one," he said. "This time the generals are men who were captains in the last war. They at least understand their men better now. This will be better war for the common soldier, because the senior officers were young officers and soldiers in the line in the last one."

But he was moody. "White men, civilized men, killing each other!" he would exclaim. "What we need are Europeans—Frenchmen, Germans, Italians, Englishmen, who are Europeans."

SOME ONE had picked up a little paper at Gibraltar. It announced that the second casualty list of the British army showed 700 dead, mostly in the artillery. Evidently all is not entirely quiet on the Western front.

BirthControl Wins Favor, Group Told

Dr. W. E. Morris, Federation Director, Addresses Mothers Health Association

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

In the last quarter of a century, birth control has been carried from the status of a radical idea to that of a great sociological movement, Dr. Woodbridge E. Morris, director of the Birth Control Federation of America, told members of the Mothers' Health Association yesterday.

Addressing the third annual luncheon meeting of the local organization at the Y. W. C. A., he asserted that "25 years ago there was not a birth control clinic in the country; no medical or lay organization had indorsed birth control and the mention of the subject in polite society was radical and distinctly off-color."

In contrast to this, a recent Gallup poll showed a vote of 77 per cent in favor of the dissemination of birth control information as part of the Public Health Service.

"Obstacles of ignorance, misunderstanding, fear and indifference are crumbling today, but still must be reckoned with," he said.

"Featured in the national birth control program is a rural health project, which in the past year provided birth control information, under medical direction, to some 23,000 mothers living in the South and far West areas where neither private physicians nor clinics are available to serve them. Also since January, 1939, 136 new birth control clinics have been established, bringing the total for the Nation to 562."

Dr. Morris, prior to taking his present position as director of the Birth Control Federation, had been a field physician with the City Health Department of Baltimore and a resident physician at Johns Hopkins Hospital. Later, a resident physician at the Henry Ford Hospital, Detroit, and for three years, director of the division of maternal and child health and the crippled children's service of the Delaware State board of health.

He was introduced by Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president of the association, who presided at the luncheon which was attended by more than 150 members and guests.

At the business meeting, Dr. Agnes McNutt, physician in attendance at the clinic maintained by the association in Southwest Washington, reported that 709 patients had been there in 1939, compared to 92 in the last half of 1937, when it was first opened. The total since its establishment was 2,495, she said.

Mrs. Willson was reelected president of the association; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice president, and Mrs. Lewis C. Ecker, treasurer. Mrs. David R. Craig was elected secretary to succeed Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley. Two new members named on the medical advisory board were Dr. Henry L. Darner and Dr. Roger O'Donnell, jr.

Barbara Trigg Brown to Give Lecture Friday on Virginia's Historic Homes

BARBARA TRIGG BROWN (Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club) Friday night will give a lecture on "Historic Homes and Gardens of Virginia" at the auditorium of George Washington High School in Alexandria. She will begin with Jamestown and Williamsburg, going up into the Northern Neck, on to Piedmont and Albemarle sections, on to Fredericksburg and back to Alexandria.

Mrs. Brown is as well known for her illustrated lectures as she is for her activities in the Democratic Club, and her talks always attract large audiences. This one just precedes Virginia Garden Week and will give prospective garden tourists an idea of what they want to see and where to find the places in which they are most interested.

MOTHERS ELECT — Mothers are becoming as sorority-minded as their daughters out at G. W. U. The mothers clubs, formed as auxiliaries to the different sororities, have regular meetings and not only supply the sorority rooms with attractive furnishings and all the comforts of home, including cakes and cookies for special occasions, but also join with the chapters in some of their activities.

The Mothers' Club of Kappa Chapter, Phi Sigma Sigma, will have a joint meeting with the chapter early this month. It has recently elected new officers headed by Mrs. M. L. Dorfman as president.

INSTALL CHAPTER—Dorothy Matthews, regional councilor for Alpha Iota, international honorary business sorority, was in North Carolina last week-end, where she installed Zeta Delta Chapter at East Carolina Teachers College, in Greenville.

She was accompanied by Lura Loring, Dorothy Palmer and Lucille Harn, of the D. C. Alumna Chapter, who assisted in the installation ceremonies.

Miss Loring is president of the D. C. Alumna Chapter which is composed of girls who have been members elsewhere and have come to the District to reside. There are also two other groups here, Alpha Omega, active chapter at Strayer College, and the Washington Alumna, composed of alumnae members of Alpha Omega. The membership of the three is approximately 150.

ANOTHER ORGANIZER—Martha Bean Gleason, president of the Credit Women's Breakfast Club, went to Allentown, Pa., Saturday to organize such a club there. Under her leadership the club was successfully formed and will soon join District and international groups. At present there are two breakfast clubs included in District, the local club and that of Reading, Pa. A representative group from the Reading Club attended the formation of the Allentown Club.

JUNIOR GUILD—The annual business meeting of the Junior Woman's Guild of American University will be held tomorrow night in the women's residence hall.

TO HONOR BIRTHDAY—A class of candidates will be initiated into Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, on April 26 as a feature of a party the chapter plans, honoring the birthday of its senior regent, Mrs. Howard J. Clark.

New committee chairmen recently appointed by the regent include Mrs. Ola D. Lee, publicity; Mrs. Mary Ward, Mooseheart committee; Mrs. Jane Davis, child care and training. Mrs. Anna Wagner, graduate regent, and Effie Hardy have been appointed guides.

Alpha Chi Omega Installs Officers

The Alpha Chi Omega Sorority of American University has installed as its new president, Adelaide Bushong, succeeding Barbara Marshall.

Others in office for the coming year are Virginia Hozier, of Dundalk, Md., vice president; Sarah Ann Rapp, of Washington, corresponding secretary; Nancy Warner, of Pine Hill, N. Y., recording secretary; Beth Drake, of Washington, treasurer; Jane Esterline, of Altoona, Pa., social chairman, and Edith Mitchell, of Connellsville, Pa., rush chairman.

Miss Bushong, a resident of Leesburg, Va., is considered one of the most outstanding members of the junior class at A. U. She is in practically every phase of extra-curricular activity, and also maintains a straight B average. She is also editor of the college yearbook, member of the university newspaper staff, women's debate team, and International Relations Club.

Dr. May Bere Talks on Aid For Refugees

Palestine Delegate Addresses Seminar At Jewish Center

With war in Europe, the responsibility for aiding refugees now being settled in Palestine rests in a large measure with Americans, Dr. May Bere, Palestinian delegate to the Pioneer Women's Organization, told the Washington group yesterday.

She addressed the first sessions of a two-day seminar, at the Jewish Community Center, yesterday afternoon and evening with 200 women attending. These represented the three local societies of Pioneer Women for Palestine.

Dr. Bere, who has been an instructor in the training schools in Palestine, working in child psychology for the last 14 years, told of how the work is carried on and said only two years are required for the immigrant to become happily adjusted to the life there. She described the nine agricultural schools for girls which are maintained by the Pioneer Women and the other institutions in which they learn domestic arts such as sewing and cooking, laundering, weaving, tailoring and the making of reed furniture. All this prepares them, she said, for the cooperative restaurants, laundries and other fields of endeavor in which they are established when they go out into the communities.

An executive meeting was held yesterday morning with Mrs. Samuel Bugatch, chairman of group 1, presiding. There was general discussion of the program of the local groups and suggestions were offered by Dr. Bere for expansion of the activities next season.

A luncheon was held at 12:30 of which Mrs. Saul H. Gorenstein was chairman. Palestinian songs, presented by Mrs. Saul Friedman, were a feature.

Last night the League for Palestine sponsored a forum, led by Dr. Bere.

The arrangement committee for the luncheon included Mrs. Nathan Cohen and Mrs. Louis Lieberman, chairmen, assisted by Mrs. Esther Bernstein, Mrs. H. Cohen, Mrs. Isaac M. Feldman, Mrs. Samuel Harrison, Mrs. J. Keele, Mrs. Lubs Kaplan, Mrs. Samuel I. Levine, Mrs. Max Sadle, Mr. Ben Silver, Mrs. Jack Steinman and Mrs. Louis Winer.

This afternoon another siminar will be held with Mrs. Samuel Horvitz presiding and, this evening, a membership reception sponsored by the Hanita Club. Mrs. Harry Grossman will be in charge, assisted by the membership committee, including Mrs. Stanley Koenig and Mrs. William Kricum. Hostesses for the evening will be Mrs. Harry Dobkin, Mrs. Alexander Brazin, Mrs. Oscar Fisher, Mrs. Izadore Goodman, Mrs. David Kirschbaum, Mrs. Al Golden, Mrs. Harry Saragovitz, Mrs. David Scherr and Mrs. I. Warner.

HUGHES

The Roses now live in a real five-story house, with no less than 14 rooms. There's a drive-it-yourself elevator, which leads to the upper regions. William, like so many short-statured men, is vastly inspired by Napoleon, and so is his combination bedroom and office, on the fourth floor facing the river. But on its wall is a Modigliani portrait of Jean Cocteau—pretty much of an acquired taste, according to Eleanor. She says she cried when she first saw it. You and I know pictures like that, hey, kids? Some of these nutty moderns. Oh my goodness.

Eleanor's own slumber chamber, on the third floor directly below Pop's, is very soft and feminine, carpeted entirely with a soft, cream-colored fabric. The room has blue over-drapes and there are delicate white glass curtains over venetian blinds, which give a remarkable sunny light to the place when the blinds are open.

Eleanor has coined a pet word for the room. It's "terrific." Outside, the Rose Holm (pretty fearful pun, that baby) is eighteenth century English, but indoors it runs to many mirrors and a lot of rose pink in the decor. The big knockout is an Adam circular staircase that winds right up to the fourth floor.

It's a very gay and rich job that Bill Pahlmann has turned out for the Roses. The house itself is said to have cost the mighty mite $100,000. But shucks! He must have made nearly 10 times that at the Aquacade at the fair last summer. And why not spend the boodle on a lovely setting for his pretty wife? So Willy took the rubber bands off the bankrool, and a peach of a devecote is the result.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of that fair, 1940 type, 3,000 men are now toiling on the lot to get it set by May 11, or kick-off day, and the 6,000 people who will work on the grounds have already been hired. As they should have done a year ago, the bosses are bearing down on the amusement zone, and it is even reported that the magnificent Gypsy Rose Lee, who made the term "strip-tease" known to the Great American Home, will work at the fair. In short, the boys in Flushing are realizing what we all told them over a year ago—that the basic reason people go to fairs is to have fun, and not to get culture or knowledge of the insides of a gasoline motor . . .

Napoleon Influence Seen in Master's Chamber and Office

The long-legged blonde Philadelphia society girl, Anne Francine, has moved her barytone torch songs back to the Coq Rouge, where she made her local singing debut. She denies a report that she is going to marry Hobart Cook, son of Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook.

Mrs. Sylvia Penner left $11,900 in cash in her purse at one of our famed Automat nickel-in-the-slot restaurants the other day. I can't figure why a lady with all that dough would eat there. On the other hand, maybe that's the way to save up $11,900. Maybe we'd all better try it—if there is that much.

$400 Pledged To Craft House

Chevy Chase Chapter of the Y. W. C. A. at a meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. Harold Brooks, 3 West Irving street, pledged $400 toward the proposed new craft house at Kamp Kahlert on West River in Maryland.

Plans also were discussed yesterday for a luncheon to be given in May, proceeds of which will be used to send a girl to Kamp Kahlert in the summer. Mrs. Hubert R. Snoke, the president, presided.

Mrs. Bolitha Laws was co-hostess with Mrs. Brooks. Miss Elsa Peterson, president of the Y. W. C. A., was guest speaker of the afternoon, discussing the organization's part in promoting world fellowship and her own efforts in this direction during her trips abroad. Mrs. Wilbur Simonson sang, accompanied by Mrs. Roger Wells.

Proceeds will be used for the alumnae scholarship fund and the school charities.

Trio of Foods Makes Breakfast or Luncheon Treat

AN EGGLESS world would be a rather sad one—especially for the cook—for half the dishes she makes would fall flat and the other half would fall apart. But it isn't an eggless world and there are many niches in a day's meals that egg dishes fit into—all the way from breakfast to dinner.

Eggs Baked in Tomato Sauce are an appealing Sunday breakfast or luncheon dish. Served with strips of crisp bacon and fresh hot corn sticks all those who eat will consider such a combination a great treat.

Eggs Baked in Tomato Sauce—Butter individual ramekins or shirred egg dishes. Then into each one spoon 2 or 3 tablespoons of condensed tomato soup; thick, just as it comes from the can. Drop an egg into each dish to top of the soup. Bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees, until the eggs are set which will be in 14 to 17 minutes.

Corn Sticks—Mix in double boiler 1 cup cornmeal, ¾ cup wheat flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt, 2 cups sour milk and 2 tablespoons shortening. Set over hot water and cook 10 minutes. Let cool, add well-beaten eggs and 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in 1 tablespoon cold water. This makes a better textured bread than if the meal is hot cooked. Grease shallow baking pan. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees in greased cornstick pans, for about 20 minutes.

Mrs. McNary Heads Group

Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of the Senator, is chairman of the garden gadgets committee for the flower mart to be held on May Day at the Washington Cathedral. The members are meeting regularly at the home of the vice chairman, Mrs. Henry Leonard, painting flower pots, making price tags and tinting wooden birds for flower beds.

Committee members will be on hand at their booth during the hours of the mart, noon to 6 o'clock, and are now assembling unusual gadgets from all points of the compass to be sold there.

In addition to the chairman and vice chairman, the committee includes: Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Mrs. Thomas Robins, Mrs. Peston Delano, Mrs. Guy Henry, Mrs. Ralph Brewster and Mrs. McCook Knox.

It has been announced that Mrs. Harold Walker will serve with the Montgomery Farm Women's Cooperative Market group which, for the first time, is contributing a booth this year. Mrs. J. B. Waters, of Germantown, Md., president of this incorporated body of farm women has given the names of Mrs. Elsie Daniel, of Poolesville, Md., and Mrs. Anna Waters, of Germantown, Md., as the committee from that organization.

Miss Bell Gurnee, general chairman of the flower mart committee, now convalescent after an attack of the influenza, has called a general meeting at her house next Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock. Committee chairmen, booth chairmen and others interested have been asked to attend.

The play, "Peter Pan," will be presented at the Wardman Park Hotel on May 10, 11 and 13 by pupils of the Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Art under the direction of Mrs. Rose Robison Cohen.

Next Tuesday night the regular meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. D. Edward Clark, 1314 Farragut street northwest, with Sefton Darr as speaker on "District Suffrage." Mrs. Martha Kirby, Mrs. R. R. Duffie and Mrs. Clarence Woodward will be assistant hostesses.

The Dennison Vocational School will provide a luncheon for the club on April 11. Proceeds will go to the school. Mrs. Clark, of the educational committee, is chairman of the meeting.

There has also been added Miss Mary Terrell and Miss Jessie Rentz, the chairman of the ways and means committee and treasurer, respectively, of the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the mission.

Second Gilfond Book To Be Out Tomorrow

'I Go Horizontal' Tells of Author's Struggle With Sleeping Sickness And of Those Associated With Fight

By Hope Ridings Miller

A WRITING CAREER that got its first magazine promotion out of the Capital's social scene will take another step forward tomorrow when Duff Gilfond's second book, "I Go Horizontal," is published. A Washington resident for a number of years, Mrs. Gilfond combed the town for newspaper features back in the days of the Coolidge Administration and eventually ran on to some colorful material that paved a way into a more lucrative field.

Entitled "At the Court of St. Calvin," and published in The American Mercury, her first magazine article played up social precedence from every amusing angle imaginable, with special emphasis on the famous Alice Longworth-Dolly Gann tempest in a teapot.

Other pieces for The American Mercury followed. Many a Washingtonian can remember that back in the late 20s and early 30s countless big-wigs saw themselves in print by way of the sparkling pen of Duff Gilfond. She wrote an amazingly successful article, "Mr. Speaker," about Nicholas Longworth. Another entitled "Gentlemen of the Ensemble" played up such colorful Congressional figures as Representative Bloom and Representative Tinkham. "Gentlewomen of the House" portrayed Ruth Baker Pratt and her money; Ruth Bryan Owen and her sex appeal; Florence P. Kahn and her amusingly tart tongue, and Ruth Hanna McCormick, who asked no odds of any Congressional contemporary—man or woman.

The first full-length profile of LaGuardia found its way into The American Mercury by way of Mrs. Gilfond's typewriter. Entitled LaGuardia of Harlem," it is still a standard reference for any person on the trail of material about the Little Flower.

Mrs. Gilfond's first book, "The Rise of St. Calvin," stemmed from an article she wrote for The American Mercury. During the entire time she was buzzing about town gathering material for articles on Capitalites in general, she was also planning a biography of Coolidge—a life story that would include anecdotes, impressions of friends, and her own impressions based on some first-hand study of Coolidge after he retired to his front porch in Northampton, Mass.

BEFORE THAT BOOK was completed, she had begun to collect material on the one to be published tomorrow. In 1930, she fell victim of that rare disease known to laymen as sleeping sickness. For ten years she has struggled against it, and "I Go Horizontal" tells the story of her fight to regain her health.

When her Coolidge biography was published in 1932, she had literally "gone horizontal." She was flat on her back waging the fight of, and for, her life. Out of that experience came her second book—a story of her struggle and the physicians, specialists, nurses and technicians, presented, according to the author, "with all good will and without too much malice."

As the author sees it, doctors frequently don't understand the psychology of the patient. Her forthcoming tome turns the tables, and for once a patient examines the doctor and diagnoses the malady. Incidentally, the book is dedicated "to the doctors—with best wishes for rapid improvement, from a devoted patient."

Mrs. Gilfond in private life is the wife of Max Edward Gilfond, who was formerly special assistant to Rexford Guy Tugwell, and is now connected with the WPA.

Speaking of books—the best one I've read lately, "The Good Old Days," is being widely discussed around these parts. Written by David L. Cohn, who has spent much time in Washington, it is a history of morals and manners as seen through the Sears Roebuck catalogs from 1905 to the present. You're going to hear a lot about this book, if you haven't already. Might as well read it now, and have something to make dinner-table talk all this season . . . and the next.

Mr. Cohn breezed into town from New York a couple of days ago, made a few hurried calls and then was on his way to Texas by way of South Carolina. Chances are, you'll be seeing some magazine articles about both States before long . . . under the by-line of David L. Cohn, of course.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MR. AND MRS. Anthony Rumbold asked a few friends for cocktails on Monday to say good-by to Ricardo Siri, popular First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, who is off to Argentina for a leave of several months. This will be Ricardo's first visit home since he came to Washington four years ago and he is thoroughly enjoying the prospect.

The Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, Hugo Gouthier, came with Mme. Gouthier, who looked so pretty in pale blue with a little white hat veiled in a wisp of black. They have just returned from a trip to Charleston, where, they said, the camellias are in full bloom.

PRINCESS HOHENLOHE came in with her husband, the very nice "Alek." Her dress was a bright spring print and on her head she wore a fly-away halo of transparent, black horse-hair braid.

Others wishing bon voyage to Senor Siri were his colleague, Miguel Quirno-Lavalle; Miss Adelaide Whitehouse, Robert Coe, and Ogden Hammond, jr.

Most of Rumbold's guests were dining later with Baron and Baroness Baeyens in honor of lovely Beatrice Phillips, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Rome and Mrs. Phillips, who will sail within the week for Europe and war work.

John Foster, of the British Embassy, was host at a small dinner party the other night at his house in Georgetown. Guest of honor was Mrs. Mary Hand Churchill, of New York, who was visiting Mrs. Shaw Parker. Mrs. Churchill was smart in a long-sleeved dinner dress of red and gold lame and Mrs. Parker wore a white robe de style.

A new arrival in Washington is Pamela Whatley, who has come here to work in the British Embassy. After dinner she and John Foster read aloud humorous bits from back copies of a news letter which they, together with Barbara Wace, now also working here at the Embassy, used to publish in London. The authors and publishers got a tremendous ribbing on their British sense of humor, and derisive comments which they returned with interest. Also dining with Mr. Foster that night were William Gray Elmslie and Sherlock Davis.

MRS. MARION WARBURG gave a cocktail party recently to introduce to some of her friends Dr. H. E. Enthovan. Dr. Enthovan is a very jolly person and plays the piano to perfection. At Mrs. Warburg's, he complied happily with every request for music whether it was opera, Viennese waltzes, Chopin or Bach. This gifted musician is also a composer. He is Dutch and came to Washington on business which has something to do with tea and coffee, but I don't believe that he will be allowed much time for anything else but piano playing while he is here.

Among Mrs. Warburg's guests were Commander and Mme. Pierre Benech, Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, Mrs. Wainwright Abbott, Rafal Lepkowski, Mrs. Matthew Hanna, who, happily for her many friends, has come back to Washington to live, and Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Platt. Mrs. Platt is the sister of Dean Acheson and her husband is in business here. The Platts, who only settled in Washington this winter, live in Georgetown not far from the Achesons.

COUNT AND COUNTESS Lasocki have returned from a motor trip to South Carolina, and Countess Lasocka is planning still further travels. She will accompany Donna Julia Brambilla to Mexico and there will visit Countess Roberti.

Keith Officer, counselor of the Australian Legation, has returned from a trip to Montreal, where he went on official business. He managed to get in a little skiing over the week-end in spite of the beginnings of a spring thaw.

Irene Givotovsky Wed to Virginian

Mr. and Mrs. Victor T. Givotovsky announce the marriage of their daughter, Irene, to John Ryland Garnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher B. Garnett, of Arlington, Va.

The marriage took place on March 23 in University, Va. The bride was graduated from the New York School of Social Work. Prior to that she attended Bennington College. Mr. Garnett was graduated from the University of Virginia. The couple will make their home in Forrestville, Md.

Crowds Hear Philadelphians Give Concert

Mrs. Harrison Tweed Center of Attraction During Intermission

One of the most brilliant audiences of the season turned out at Constitution Hall last evening for the final concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Though disappointed that Washington's own Mrs. Edwin Watson could not be the soloist, because of an injury to her back, the audience agreed that Rose Bampton, of the Metropolitan Opera, gave a marvelous performance.

A center of attention in the lobby during intermission was Mrs. Harrison Tweed (Michael Strange), of New York. Here for a brief stay, she dined with Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins before coming on to the concert. She wore a long-fitted coat, very plain, over her evening dress, and chatted with John Lodge, actor-brother of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. She will shortly publish in book form her memoirs, now running in a magazine.

The familiar faces to be found at most Capital concerts were to be seen at Constitution Hall. Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, occupied her box accompanied by several ladies from the embassy. The White House box was occupied by Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who was accompanied by her attractive sister, Miss Ann Dahlman. Mrs. Ickes was stunning in a black and green Chinese broeaded evening wrap, an effective contrast with her red hair.

Miss Boardman With Party

Next to her was Miss Mabel Boardman, who had with her the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg and Winthrop Murray Crane. Miss Boardman wore a dark red dress with a gold lame scarf and Countess van Rechteren's black dress had a scarlet jacket embroidered in gold.

Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, who is chairman of the Washington Committee of the Philadelpia Symphony Orchestra, was accompanied by Mr. Miller and Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone. Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts had with them in their box the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, who topped off her frock with a gold lame wrap. Mrs. Roberts was in black with a scarf of sables.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward occupied their box. Mrs. Woodward wearing a gown of palest blue brocade with elbow-length sleeves. They were to have given a supper for Mrs. Watson.

Many Diplomats In Attendance

Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, wore a fitted black fur coat over her dinner dress. Others from the diplomatic corps in the audience included Prince and Princess Hohenlohe.

J. Pierrepont Moffat, recently returned from the European visit as aide to Sumner Welles, was accompanied by Mrs. Moffat. Others seen were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, Mrs. Drew Pearson, in a flame-colored chiffon coat topped by an ermine jacket, accompanied by Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr.; Miss Mary Bradley, wearing a long velvet wrap of emerald green; Miss Anne Perin, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mrs. John Sternhagen and Miss Irene Boyle.

Stearns to Fete Congressmen At Reception

Representative and Mrs. Foster Stearns, of New Hampshire, have issued invitations to a reception this afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

Their guests will include Republican Senators and Representatives from the New England States, the seven newly elected Republican Representatives in Congress, and others.

Among those present will be Senator and Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine; Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, of Vermont; Senator and Mrs. Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont; Senator H. Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire; Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts; Senator and Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire. Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, and Jessie Summer, of Illinois, will be among others present.

Included in the group of new Republicans will be Representative Frances P. Bolton and Representative and Mrs. J. Harry McGregor, of Ohio; Representative and Mrs. Clarence E. Kilburn and Representative and Mrs. Edwin A. Hall, of New York; Representative and Mrs. Robert K. Goodman, of Iowa; Representative and Mrs. Bartel L. Jonkman, of Michigan, and Representative and Mrs. John Jennings, jr., of Tennessee.

Macfarlane-Rees Nuptials Monday

Mr. and Mrs. Gustav A. Rees, of Pottsville, Pa., announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Kathryn Rees, to Francis A. Macfarlane, formerly of Nyack, N. Y., now making his home in Washington.

The couple will be married at St. Thomas the Apostle Church on Monday at 9 a. m. Last Saturday fellow employes of the Railroad Retirement Board, where the couple are employed, entertained at a party in honor of the engaged pair. The party was given at the home of Mrs. Edith Hayden.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

THE MANY WASHINGTONIANS who remember Edward Kulikowski as the most dapper of diplomats who ever bowed from the waist are fascinated by a series of articles he is doing in a national magazine. The first article started this month and tells of his hair-raising adventures—bicycling through the blood of peasants is one—in making his way through Poland after a bomb had hit the train on which, as a diplomat, he was trying to join his government in Rumania. Mr. Kulikowski was for several years secretary of the Polish Embassy here.

His friends gave him up for dead after his train was wrecked, and it was many weeks before they heard he had finally escaped to this country. With is attractive sister, Mme. Kulikowska Higersberger, who visited here four or five years ago, the handsome former diplomat is making his home in New York.

To see charming Mme. Wankowicz smiling and chatting at a party, one would never suspect that she was doing all her own housework, even the cooking. But the conquest of Poland has effected all that country's representatives here, including those who were accustomed to living on a handsome scale.

Mme. Wankowicz—her husband was formerly counselor of the embassy here—is feeling quite happy in spite of everything these days because she and her husband have just received the first word they've had from their son-in-law since before the war. He is in a prisoner's camp in the German part of Poland but evidently obtained special permission to send his in-laws a few carefully censored lines. His wife, the former Miss Irene Wankowicz, is still at his mother's estate near Cracow, and the two women are attempting to manage it.

When a sale was announced recently of exhibits in the Polish pavilion at the World's Fair, everyone wondered if this meant the exiled government wasn't going to participate this year after all. But the pavilion will be opened and the articles purchased will not go to their owners until after the fair closes. M. Wankowicz is now Polish commissioner in the renovated meadows of Flushing.

ANOTHER former diplomat, Count Antoni Tarnowski, who lost his job here in the embassy purge of several months ago, is working for a brokerage firm in New York. He is in town for a few days to visit Edward Weintal, the Polish newspaperman.

Representatives of the British Empire in Washington are rallying around to give parties for the newly arrived Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey. The South African Minister entertained them last week and tomorrow the Canadian envoy will give a luncheon for them . . . Forthcoming dinners include Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton's on Wednesday, April 17, and Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle's on Friday, April 12.

JOHN LODGE, actor brother of the Senator, is in town for a few days and is staying with his mother, Mrs. George Cabot Lodge. A French movie in which he stars, "Koenigsmark," will, we hear, be seen in this country shortly.

Mr. Lodge and his wife, the former Francesca Braggiotti, of Boston, are making their home in New York for the time being. They recently returned from several years of movie making in France and Italy. Mr. Lodge's latest film is a French one centering about the Sarajevo assassination which precipitated the last war—sort of a sequel to the successful "Meyerling." He spent many years abroad as a child and speaks French and Italian perfectly.

Radcliffe Elects Miss Marion Doyle Red Tassel Officer

The honor of being selected as one of ten seniors who have contributed most to Radcliffe College has just gone to Miss Marion Wade Doyle, attractive daughter of the dean of George Washington University and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle.

Miss Doyle was chosen one of ten red tassel officers, elected annually by their classmates. They later serve on committees for commencement plans. Miss Doyle is editor-in-chief of the senior yearbook at Radcliffe. She has been an associate editor of the Radcliffe News, a member of the press board for three years, and is a member of the Music Club and Idler, Radcliffe's dramatic society.

House Daughters To Lunch Today

The Daughters of the House of Representatives will meet today in the House Restaurant for their final luncheon before their annual dinner dance on Friday at the Shoreham Hotel. Miss Bonnie Patton, president, will preside.

Miss Betty Jensen, chairman of the committee for the dance, will gie a report. Mrs. Eleanore Toland is in charge of reservations for Friday.

Sen. Chandler, Wife Hosts At Dinner

Members of Kentucky Delegation in Congress Are Honor Guests

Senator and Mrs. A. B. Chandler, of Kentucky, were hosts at dinner last evening at the Mayflower, entertaining for the Kentucky delegation in Congress.

The company included Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley and Representative Virgil Chapman. Others present were Representative and Mrs. A. J. May, Representative and Mrs. Brent Spence, Representative and Mrs. John M. Robsion, Representative and Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, Representative and Mrs. Edward W. Creal, Representative and Mrs. Noble Gregory, Representative and Mrs. Beverly M. Vincent and Representative and Mrs. Joe B. Bates.

Also Mrs. Catherine R. Conner, national committee woman of Kentucky; Judge and Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mr. and Mrs. Ulric Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Arbogast, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Ardery, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thornberg, Walter Davenport and Miss Henrietta Sherwood.

Dinner was served in the Pan American room of the hotel following a reception in the adjoining Seventeenth street parlor. Yellow roses and blue delphinium were used in the tall silver vases on an oblong table with fern strewn over the colth.

Nicol Smiths Back in Capital

Back in Washington after an absence of more than a year—much of which was spent in China—Mr. and Mrs. Nicol Francis Smith are occupying the Reservoir road home of Mrs. Smith's mother, Mrs. Anne Archbold. Mrs. Archbold is cruising with Mr. and Mrs. David G. Fairchild in the East Indies and will not return here before next fall. Mrs. Smith is the former Miss Moira Archbold.

Appearing on the bookstalls last Wednesday was "Burma Road," written by Mr. Smith. Most of the material for the book was gathered during the couple's stay in China. They spent six weeks in Kumming in the Province of Yunnanfu. Mr. Smith accompanied the United States Consul at Yunnanfu, Paul C. Meyer, along the Burma road. Mr. and Mrs. Smith took a trip through French Indo-China during their stay in the East.

The former Moira Archbold is an excellent violinist and during her residence in San Francisco became interested in the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. She was recently elected a member of the board of directors for the children's concerts of the orchestra, which is under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Wheel Toys Best for Spring, Summer Play

Will Entice Child Outdoors, Also Aid Him in Learning Traffic Rules

By Martha Ellyn.

Martha Ellyn

IN DOUBLE quick time warm weather will soon be with us. And with good weather you may be equally sure that the youngsters will be spending their playtime outdoors in the sunshine. The best way to make outdoor play enjoyable and beneficial is to be sure that the children have wheeled toys and outdoor games that fit their particular stage of physical development.

Good outdoor play equipment really pays dividends because healthy, active youngsters are bound to give hard service to everything they use. A surprising number of parents overlook the important point—the size of wheel toys. The whole value of peddling lies in free exercise of muscles, whether the youngster gets astride a velocipede, a bicycle or propels a sidewalk auto. If the leg space is cramped, the exercise is going to involve more strain than benefit.

It is equally true that a large size bicycle may be too heavy and too large for a youngster to peddle at his stage of size and strength. A too large wheel toy is poor economy even though Junior will, in the course of time, grow up to it. So the first rule for a wise parent is to pick the youngsters' wheel toys with a careful eye to size.

Juveniles have enthusiasm for anything on wheels. Through wheel toys the youngsters can be introduced to the whys and wherefores of traffic rules. Even in play they can solve imaginary traffic tangles as is shown by the arrangement of their miniature cars, trucks and busses in the picture above

New Models are Stylish

In the stores you will see sidewalk autos, velocipedes, bicycles and doll carriages as smartly styled as any in a grown-up auto show, even the traditional express wagon and scooter is dressed up this season with streamlines and chromium trim.

Streamlined trains, clippers, buses, trucks and autos all follow the latest developments in design. Whether they are 2 inches long or 6 feet, they are most realistic. Especially if your youngster is a bit shy, make an effort to get him a particularly smart wheel toy, with all the latest gadgets. Such an enviable possession is a dependable way of giving prestige to a youngster. When other children admire and beg for a chance to ride Johnny often finds it's easier to be self-confident in his social life.

For exercise, the main thing is to choose a wheel toy of sturdy construction that fits the length of the child's leg. There is a variety this spring in the pedal field, for youngsters who admire G-men there are police motorcycles—some with sidecars. There are dump trucks, fire engines and even hook and ladder wagons, and a sidewalk tractor that is modeled after the latest design used by farmers.

Teach Traffic Rules Early

As soon as children are old enough for velocipedes, wagons, or pedal autos, it's a good idea to start explaining the traffic rules. You can make an interesting game this spring by organizing a neighborhood group of children who are about the same age. Let each one act as a traffic cop and direct the others through maneuvers with their wheel toys.

You can plot out a game that fairly bristles with competitive spirit. It's a good idea to have certificates of merit, badges or some sort of reward for those who pass their traffic examinations with flying colors. The years of childhood are the formative years. Lessons earliest learned are best learned. If you will introduce young Johnny to the whys and wherefores of traffic rules now, you'll be capitalizing juvenile enthusiams for anything on wheels in a highly practical educational way.

Roller skates are also an exercise aid that children revel in. Now is the time to make sure the children have the equipment which will help get the proper amount of healthful exercise.

Every Reducer Strikes Snag At Some Point in Her Routine

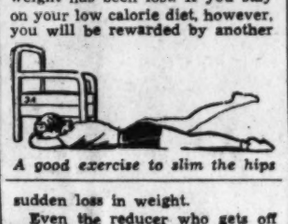
By Ida Jean Kain

Generally speaking, the reducers who lose right off the bat have been reckless with their calories for a long period of time and have acquired considerable soft fat—the kind that is most amenable to diet. The stubborn reducers are the ones who have been fairly careful of their calories so that a cut makes less difference. In addition, they are likely to have a higher percentage of compact weight, which is difficult to break down.

Water Replaces Fat

Occasionally a reducer will gain a pound or so! This paradoxical behavior of the scales is only to be accounted for by water retention. Sometimes as fat is lost, water is stored in the tissues. The water storage may balance or even exceed the weight lost. This storage may continue for one or two weeks, but if the diet is continued there will be an abrupt decline in weight equal to the amount which should have been lost during that time.

If you are subject to water retention, you can look for a reaccumulation of water in the tissues later on when a great deal of weight has been lost. If you stay on your low calorie diet, however, you will be rewarded by another sudden loss in weight.



A good exercise to slim the hips

Even the reducer who gets off to a smooth start must expect to strike snags. Reducing is never a steady down-trend. There are periods in which no fat is lost. These occur, roughly, after 10 or 25 pounds have been checked off.

When these standstills occur depends on the total amount of weight to be lost, and they have several explanations—water retention included. It may be that the soft, flabby fat has been lost. Or the system may be economizing on calories so that, on the same low calorie diet, less demand is made on the stored fat.

Keep on Exercising

It may help you to know that all reducers have similar experiences. No matter how carefully they diet, there are days—and weeks—when they cannot lose. And some of the ones who had the hardest time are the ones who, eventually, lost the most weight.

Next to staying on your diet during a weight standstill, the most important thing is to keep on with your exercise. You can lose inches when the pounds won't budge. All that is certain about dieting is this: If you count calories, you will get down to normal weight. But with exercise it's different. If you exercise, you get results—and you get them in an amazingly short time.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 18, Keeps Family in Ignorance of Her Plan To Wed Divorced Man, 27; She Asks Reassurance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18, still in high school, and in love with a man who is 27. We have gone together nearly a year, and during that time he has shown deep affection, dependability, fine qualities and ambition. I have never known him to be irritable; nor does he patronize me because I am still a schoolgirl.

When he was just a boy, he was married to a girl he never loved. He told me this the second time I went out with him. He has never tried to conceal anything from me. He told me why the marriage failed, and I gather from his story that the fault was not his. I am a member of the Catholic church and, as you probably know, my faith does not believe in divorce. So I am wondering if it is better for me to be married outside my church, as I do not believe I could give up this man I love so deeply.

Please do not think I am a flighty girl who is temporarily infatuated. I have always been more quiet and settled than the average girl, and I have worried so much about my problem that I have grown thin and nervous. We plan to be married next September, and the time is drawing near when I must make some definite decision.

My mother knows we are fond of each other and are often together, but I confess to the mistake of not asking her advice in this matter. She plans for me to get a job after my June graduation, and has often warned me against "young marriage," as she married quite young and her marriage failed. She has nothing against my finance. She thinks he is a fine, upright person and she is very fond of him. However, many of my relatives have told me that the best thing I could do would be to "get in the Government," and dismiss any "silly ideas about marriage."

This man and I have more in common than I have ever had with anyone. We both enjoy fine music, art, books, etc. He has fine tastes and ideals. We confide in each other and he understands my sensitiveness and my tendency to have an inferiority complex. My home life has given me a strange attitude, as I believe that a home is the place where children should learn to love all that is fine in life. I missed this in my home training, but I have found it in this man, and I feel that we have grown to know each other better than most couples do, before marriage.

Please tell me whether I am wrong in loving the only person with whom I can find real happiness and security. Maybe you will tell me that I have plenty of time to forget this man, and that later I will find someone my own age who has the same traits. But I hope you will understand that I am not a child, but one who is facing a grown woman's problems. Gratefully yours, CYNTHIA.

Odds Against Happiness For Teen-Age Bride

DEAR CYNTHIA: Apparently your mind is made up to marry this man within the year, no matter who argues the wisdom of your waiting to get your bearings in an adult world, before permanently signing away your freedom of choice. What you want from me, obviously, is sympathetic, reasoned endorsement of your stubborn intention to have your way, regardless of your family's anxious (and logical) opposition.

As I have said here before, surveys inquiring into the causes of marriage failures have shown that the odds are against those unions made when the girl is less than 19 and the man more than 25. The chances seem to be against their "growing together," in the sense of maintaining authentic kinship of mind and interests. A girl of 18 is, as yet, so little related to life that she has no way of knowing what her criteria of fundamental values will be by the time she is 23—which, incidentally, seems to be the "good luck" age for a girl to marry.

While you may be genuinely in love with this man at this time—because he stimulates and satisfies your mind, and makes answer to your spiritual need of understanding—that is by no means proof that he would be a compatible mate when you have attained your full growth. So far as your final personality-form is concerned, you are yet in the most fluid and tentative phase. And the very fact that you, at 18, find this man of 27 uniquely congenial, suggests that in five or ten years more you will have outgrown him completely. The idea may strike you as preposterous today; but if you marry him this year in an excess of foolhardy, untried adolescent fervor, the chances are 10 to 1 that you will live to regret the step.

It is likely that the remarkably complementary quality of your relationship during the past year is a transient phenomenon, due as much to the comparative immaturity of his social or psychological development, (to your comparative precociousness. And yet, the fact that you are the child of a "broken home" may provide the true explanation of your obsessive attachment to this older man. Just now, his nine years' seniority seems far more impressive than it will a few years hence. It makes him a graybeard in your estimation. And it is possible that the whole "build up," on your side, is a compensation for a relationship you yearned for with your absentee father and never had.

My advice to you is to postpone marriage until you have had at least two years' experience in the business world. This will give you the broader acquaintanceship with grown men—casually pursuing the affairs of grown men—which you need in order to judge this man objectively. Today, you are seeing him out of proportion and out of perspective. You are staggered by his grownup importance, and by the miracle of an adult man's paying you romantic attention. And believe me, if the attachment has imperishable vitality, of the kind which would justify marriage, you can well afford to wait.

Now, with regard to your church's stand on divorce—as I wrote on July 24, 1939, in this column, "the Catholic Church does not recognize divorce in instances where the marriage has been valid (from the viewpoint of canon law) from the beginning.

But, on the other hand, it holds certain unions to have been null from the beginning, even when the parties have entered into the partnership in good faith. If such a partnership is legally dissolved, and one person or the other thereafter becomes a member of the Catholic Church, and wishes to be married by its sacramental rites, the case is brought before the Matrimonial Court of the Diocese for review.

"Circumstances may be—and even frequently are—disclosed which justify a declaration of nullity, which is to say that, in the view of the church, a valid contract has never existed. In the event of such finding, the person whose former relationship has been dissolved by divorce (to employ the legal, civil or social term) is considered eligible for full participation in the irrevocably binding sacramental rites of marriage in the Catholic Church, of which he has now become a member."

So it seems that you might be forfeiting your church membership unnecessarily, if you were to marry a divorced man "outside the church"—because you lacked the courage and initiative to discuss your marriage intentions with your parish priest. M. H.

At the Check Stand

"We'll simply be all night getting our things—in this jam. Did you see that woman push in ahead? People simply revert to the jungle—beg pardon, I'm next? Yes, I was here before any of these other people.

"I wish you would look! They're getting coats for people who came in after we did! It's just because they're more assertive—Say, Check Girl! Check Girl! . . . She won't even look.

"Oh, here comes a mink coat out! . . . Say, it's for that woman who pushed in ahead of us! They are always the kind who get what they want . . . Well, anyway, it's only Jap mink.

"I wish you would look at that woman in the rose lace! She's getting a flower turban! Now, why on earth—oh, I bet she thought people were going to wear hats . . . There she's putting it on! Did you ever see such a sight? . . . Now I know its' our turn. Check Girl! Check Girl!

"Well, of all things! Did you see that woman push her check out ahead of mine? I bet she has nothing but an old coney . . . People like that always—wait! That woman with the hat's back! . . . She had the wrong turban! Can you beat that? . . . I might get mixed up on my coat, but I'd certainly know my hat—especially this year.

"Say! Is this my coat? . . . The one that woman's getting—with the white ermine? It looks just like it—say, Check Girl! . . . Oh, no, it's not mine. That's not real ermine. It's just bunny. And not even buck bunny!

"You know, you really take a chance owning a good wrap. I really believe the people who have the cheap lapi s and coneys are a lot better off. Look at old Mrs. Bigwigger. She has to hang on to her sables everywhere she goes . . . Yes, I understand she even has her dental work done in them.

"Now, WHERE is the check girl? . . . Probably getting somebody's $39 chubby. Those are the people who always push in ahead. Those and the minks! It's just people like you and me who have to stand back . . . Check Girl! Check Girl! I'm next!

"Oh, she's gone again! . . . Say. I wish you'd look at that pink quilted satin wrap over there! It looks like a bed jacket . . . Why, that's just what it is; . . . Well, it certainly takes all kinds of people to make a world.

"Look at that Chinese thing they're bringing out. It's the top of somebody's pajamas . . . I think it's so foolish of people in this country to try to be so exotic . . . It's really unpatriotic . . . Check Girl! Check Girl! . . . I do believe she's coming!

"Now, mine's a black velvet with a white ermine collar . . . What? . . . The check? . . . Oh, yes . . . say, where IS my check? . . . Well, I had it in my hand a minute ago . . . Where on earth could it have gone? . . . No, it isn't in my bag . . . I bet somebody's taken it! And probably checked out my coat—Oh, wait, here it is! I had stuck it in the front of my dress! Did you give her yours? . . . All right—say, Check Girl! Will you please hurry? . . .

"Say, isn't that a scream—that flowered thing over there. I bet it's a house coat. You certainly see some queer things at a place like this—oh, here she comes with our wraps! . . . No, the black one's mine—say, this doesn't look like my coat! . . . I don't believe it is. . . . Well, I can't help it if the check is the same. I know this is not my coat! Just look at that collar! See how yellow it is! That's not ermine! And look how it's frizzled! As if it had been out in the rain!

"Now, I just bet somebody has worn off my good coat and left me this old rabbit collar. What's more, this is a cheap velvet . . . and look at this lining! See how it's worn. Well, the management will certainly have to pay for this.

"What? . . . The trade mark? . . . Let's see . . . Pelf's, Ithaca, New York. Well, that's where I got mine but I know this is NOT my coat. Another thing, my coat had a little rip in the armhole . . . wait, yes, there's a little rip . . . now let me see the the pockets . . . Well, here are my white kid gloves.

"Well, I guess maybe this is my coat. It was just the way the light fell on the collar that made it look so yellow . . . See, it looks entirely different now . . . You know, this is really real ermine!"

2 Citizens Bodies Decry Fire Hazards

Columbia Heights And North Cleveland Park Groups Deplore Laxity

Two citizens associations last night attacked city officials for laxity making possible disastrous fires such as the one in which three persons lost their lives on O street early Monday morning.

Strong resolutions urged strict enforcement of District fire regulations, and an investigation of fire hazards.

Directors of a business men's organization, the Connecticut Avenue Association, indorsed Max Tendler, attorney, for the police judgeship formerly held by Prosecuting Attorney Edward M. Curran.

Reports of the several meetings follow:

Columbia Heights

Declaring that every effort must be made to prevent fires like the O street blaze, the Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night called on Congress and the District Commissioners for action.

Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, chairman of the organization's police and fire committee, introduced a resolution asking District officials to see that the city's fire laws are strictly enforced. The resolution was adopted.

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the District Bar Association, in the principal address, called President Roosevelt's choice of J. Russell Young as District Commissioner a good one. He pointed out, however, that Mr. Young's selection was not the result of action in the Citizens' Associations. He recommended that the civic groups in recommending future appointments concentrate their support on one, two, or three candidates.

Members adopted resolutions favoring optional retirement of policemen and firemen after 25 years of service, an underpass for school children at Hiatt place between the Powell Junior High and the Johnson grade schools, and a public defender.

Col. Luther Maddox was renominated for the presidency of the association. Also renominated were George H. Brown, first vice president; Mrs. Marie F. Maddox, recording secretary; W. I. Swanton, corresponding secretary. Dr. A. V. Smith was nominated second vice president; Mrs. Margaret H. Worrell and Mrs. Ella H. West were named for the third vice presidency, and Col. Glendie B. Young for treasurer. Elections will take place at the May meeting.

Connecticut Avenue

The directors of the Connecticut Avenue Association last night hopefully discussed the possibility of getting the next inaugural parade to pass along that avenue.

The matter will be laid before the association before any definite plans are launched, L. R. Colburn, president, said.

The directors indorsed Max Tendler, official of the association, for the police judgeship now vacant.

At the directors' meeting at the Mayflower, plans were made for the association's dinner-dance on April 17. Among the features will be the presentation of a check for the blood bank at Children's Hospital.

The following standing committees were appointed last night: Membership, Julius Lully, chairman; Robert Meyer, Miss Jo Ford, Lew S. Birns, Charles Saah, Carl A. Martin, B. Houston McCeney, James Styles, Jack Rollins, Harry C. Schultels; publicity, L. E. Rubel, chairman; L. E. Massey, Miss Ethel Fistere; finance and auditing, Richard Norris, chairman; Corcoran Thom, jr.; welfare, George Roberts, chairman; Arthur W. Tilley, Miss Alice Fay, L. E. Massey and B. Zweben.

North Cleveland Park

Seeking to avert another "apartment house fire catastrophe" the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night authorized a resolution asking District Commissioners to undertake an investigation of fire hazard conditions now existing here.

The resolution, to be drawn by a committee consisting of John B. Dickman, sr., and W. T. Wilkinson, will also call for strict enforcement of the city's fire laws.

The association went on record as favoring the Randolph bill to deport aliens. The organization not only approved the bill, but also recommended that the present immigration quotas be cut to one-tenth of their present size.

2 Appeals Passed And 3 Rejected By Zoning Board

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday acted favorably on two of five zoning appeals heard within the past month.

An appeal to establish an automobile repair shop on the northwest corner of Fourteenth and Church streets northwest and changing of a noncomforming establishment for use as a cleaning and dyeing agency at 4526 Georgia avenue northwest, were the two cases approved.

The cases denied follow:

V. DiBenedetto, to erect a rear two-story addition to the dwelling at 1910 Irving street northeast; S. Kann Sons Co., to erect a one and four story addition to the warehouse at Delaware avenue and C street southwest, and Harriet S. Newton to erect a garage less than 20 feet from Twenty-eighth street adjacent to the dwelling at 2800 P street northwest.

Many Voices Choked as They Swear Allegiance to 'Land of the Free;' Class Largest Admitted Since 1917

There was no happier group in Washington yesterday than 73 aliens who were sworn to allegiance at a time when United States citizenship is at the highest premium in history.

It was the largest group to be admitted at a single hearing in the District since the hectic war days of 1917.

Mingled emotions poignant and difficult to repress were apparent in the faces of the 73 as they appeared before Judge Jennings Bailey to say their oath of allegiance. Some of the voices choked. Most spoke broken English. They had spoken a dozen Old World tongues.

Six new applications for citizenship were continued for further hearing.

Among those to proudly hail his new citizenship was Mark Wollner, 37, of 3109 Wisconsin avenue northwest, a well known concert violinist.

Those naturalized yesterday were:

Benjamin Widre, 42, 619 Princeton place; Mrs. Zylpha Sweet Buettner, 25, 76 New York avenue northwest; Mrs. Julia Nader, 37, 1519 Seventeenth street northwest; Mrs. Rosalind Epstein, 27, 1629 Thirteenth street northwest; Miriam Wydra, 26, 2500 K street northwest; Erich Frank, 47, 2225 Kearny street northwest; Mrs. Gertrude Frank, 34, 2225 Kearny street northeast.

Blood Bank Gets Donation From Children

The Children's Hospital blood and serum bank fund is richer by $1.12 today, thanks to "The Good Deed Club."

An envelope filled with pennies and nickels totaling that amount was received yesterday by The Post, cosponsor of the benefit party drive recently conducted to maintain and improve the hospital's transfusion and serum division.

Regina Lust, 8-year-old daughter of Ben Lust, 808 Elder street northwest, forwarded the contribution, accompanied by a letter explaining that the Good Deed Club's members are aged from 8 to 15, and "we are very glad to give our money to the blood bank."

Meantime, Rudolph Berger, welfare chairman of the Variety Club, announced the carnival night program given by the club last Saturday raised $205 for the fund.

The blood and serum bank will benefit still further today by a party to be given at 1 p. m. by the District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association's Ladies' Auxiliary at the Southern Dairies plant, 60 M street northeast.

Mrs. Jack Schneider, chairman, said refreshments and prizes are being donated so that the entire proceeds will go into the fund.

Board May Rule On Fraternities

Unsettled questions affecting the future of high school fraternities here may come up at the Board of Education meeting this afternoon, following a discussion yesterday by Supt. Frank W. Ballou and a group of principals about the case of three boys who joined a secret unapproved fraternity.

Dr. Ballou said he did not know definitely whether the matter would come up today, but that it might.

The group discussion at a close session yesterday centered around board rules governing fraternities.

Mothers of Child Stars Irk Deanna Durbin's Discoverer

PASTERNAK

His wishes that their mothers—the would-be child actor's mothers—"would be mothers and not managers."

The fathers of the would-be child actors don't want their children to be actors. They want them to play," said the producer. It is the mothers who put on the drive. They see talent in their children and want to rush them toward Hollywood.

"And not 10 children out of 100 want to be actors. They want to play. I would not want my child to be an actor. I would want him to play," said the producer.

All the while, Pasternak was getting a manicure, in his suite at the Carlton Hotel, and talking, philosophically about the matter.

Just how some children do make the big-time of acting, the producer did not make entirely clear. He said there was a mingling "of fate and some luck" and much talent in it. So far as he is concerned.

"I only look for them when I know what I want to do with them. Our profession, anyhow, won't stand over a half dozen of them at a time—not successfully."

He laid considerable stress on naturalness in child actors. He doesn't like children with grown-up minds, those who are sophisticated. It is naturalness, the reality of their childhood, that makes the audiences, the parents in the audiences, see their own children in them, and makes children see themselves in them. That spells the success, he said.

Further, Pasternak said that he won't take a child for one picture. He wants one that the "can carry all the way up the road. It's cruel, otherwise. Like giving a child a toy, and taking it away as soon as he thinks he has learned to make it work."

Pine, Curran Start New Duties Today

Both Take Oaths Of Office; 200 At Honor Dinner For Prosecutor

New Justice David A. Pine, of District Court, and new District Attorney Edward M. Curran, Pine's successor, will take up their duties today after ceremonies yesterday inducting both into office.

At the Army and Navy Country Club last night, more than 200 persons high in Washington's official life tendered Curran a dinner with Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, as toastmaster.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, told the guests he had watched and was pleased with Curran's rise in public life in Washington. This public life, he added, began when the new prosecutor waited on tables to help himself through law school.

Long observation, he said, had shown him that Curran was "a man of broad and humane viewpoints, who would administer the prosecutor's office in the interests of humanity and of common justice." He predicted a long and distinguished career for the guest of honor.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, currently under fire in Congress, declared he felt the FBI "had a friend" in the District Attorney's office, Judge Curran, he added, likewise has a friend in the Department of Justice.

A favorable impression made some years ago on a West Virginia audience by Curran was recalled by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, who praised his work as a Police Court judge.

The new prosecutor will employ a "sound and humane discretion to shield the innocent and punish the guilty," predicted Justice Harold Stevens, of the United States Court of Appeals. Justice Stevens also praised Curran's work on the bench.

George Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins, led the praise of Curran as first of a number of speakers.

Responding, Curran expressed his gratitude for the tributes paid him and pledged his utmost to give Washington "an able and diligent administration" of the prosecutor's office.

Justice Pine was sworn in by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat after the President's commission certifying his appointment had been read by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. Justice Pine will wear a judicial robe presented by the staff of the prosecutor's office.

Curran was inducted into office by Justice Harold Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals.

Getting Education Should Be 'Fun,' Brown Grads Told

A professor who has been teaching for a quarter of a century told Washington alumni of Brown University last night that "the job of getting an education should not be damned disagreeable. There is a place for joy, beauty and fun."

The educator, Ben W. Brown of the university's faculty, spoke to about 40 club members who dined at the Army and Navy Club.

Professor Brown, discussing what he termed the "radical experiment" in education which is now taking place at Brown University, said the curriculum was merely a return to the idea of a general rounded education, replacing emphasis on specialization and departmentalization.

Senator Theodore Francis Green, Democrat, of Rhode Island, was among those who attended the dinner. James L. Whitcomb, director of alumni relations, also spoke.

Play Tourney Involves Siren And Ghosts

Most Applause Goes To 'Never Too Old' In One-Act Contest

Drama patterned around vindictive ghosts, a Broadway "siren," flaming old age and Biblical history was enacted last night at Roosevelt High School auditorium in the first installment of the one-act play tournament sponsored by the Community Centers and Playgrounds Department.

Most popular, judging by applause, were the efforts of the drama section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase in the comedy, "Never Too Old," by Esther Sagalyn.

The plot revolved around a Broadway actress habitually assigned siren parts despite a model domestic life in actuality. How consciousness of her real virtuousness plus increasing age persuaded her to seek "mother" parts before she was dissuaded by a playwright's hoax was enacted by Kay Wilkins, Martha R. Pogge, Doris R. Davidson and Rita McP. Lowe.

Also popular was "The Sister Who Walked in Silence" by Philip Johnson. Against a supernatural motif four Interior Players enacted the story of a woman's ghost that exerted her unearthly wiles on a bragadacious sport. So successful was she that the sport ultimately murdered her aged sister who had brought her death through trickery in a grim contest for a suitor's love. The players were Ben Candland, Walter Haney, Florence Konold and Grace B. Ware.

Other one-act dramas included "Only the Birds," the story of two night life-conscious parents, and "Dreams" a Biblical story.

The former was presented by the Census Bureau Dramatic Club actors: Sheldon Hupp, Eileen Truax, Leroy Mantell, Linda Cherry, and John J. Reddy. "Dreams" was played by Betty Hall, Miriam Berkowitz, Phyllis Rands, and Aubrey Rands from the Prince of Peace Players. About 300 attended.

Mrs. Johns Dies; Wife of Wisconsin Representative

Mrs. Joshua L. Johns, 59, wife of Representative Johns (Republican), of Wisconsin, died in Sibley Hospital last night after an illness of nearly five weeks.

She was president of the Seventy-Sixth Congress Ladies Club, and was prominent in Congressional circles.

Mrs. Johns was the former Esther Marian Newman, of Algoma, Wis., and was married to the Congressman on September 7, 1910. The couple had one son, Newman Johns, who resides in Algoma, but was in Washington at the time of his mother's death.

Mrs. Johns attended the University of Wisconsin where she majored in English and history, and after receiving a degree of Bachelor of Arts there was a teacher in an Algoma high school. She also was a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority.

The body will rest in the Lee funeral home, Fourth and Massachusetts avenue northeast, until 4 p. m. this afternoon. Services and interment will be in Algoma.

Nine boys, designated as outstanding citizens from as many high schools, stepped up last night to receive honor keys from the Civitan Club in its citizenship-building program.

The boys, their parents and representatives of the schools were guests at the club's dinner at the Mayflower Hotel. Dr. Eugene Merriman, club president, presented the keys, after which Edward S. Brashears, charter members and former president, made the principal address.

"The world is yours—if you master it," Brashears told the boys. "You're built for good citizenship." But he cautioned, "Those who achieve money and nothing else are the most crass failures that the world presents."

The boys are Robert Schoeneman, of Anacostia High School; James G. Deane, Central; Jack A. Gaines, Eastern; John F. Walsh, Gonzaga; Robert E. Walsh, McKinley; James T. White, jr., Roosevelt; Herbert N. Munhall, St. John's; Geoffrey F. Chew, Western; Jerry Collins, Woodrow Wilson. They were selected for the honor by faculties of the various schools.

School officials made a short introduction of each boy, citing his scholastic record and contribution to student life. An instrumental quartet from Eastern High School played during the dinner, Stewart Valle, of Western High School, sang several solos. Wives of Civitan members were among the guests.

Botanical Society Sees Pictures Of Fiji Islands

Dr. M. B. Waite coaxed 75 dozen daffodils into bloom in time for the Botanical Society of Washington dinner last night at the Mayflower.

Dr. Waite, former society president, found the flowers in bud Monday on his farm near Bowie, Md. But he had agreed to furnish the floral centerpieces, so he cut the flowers, plunged the stems into hot water, kept them in a warm room Monday night—and they came out in gleaming golden clusters for the party.

Dr. Harold St. John, professor of botany at the University of Hawaii and visiting professor at Yale, showed slides of pictures which he made on the Fiji Islands several years ago.

Dr. M. C. Merrill, society president, who is chief of publications, Department of Agriculture, presided.

Washington Liquor Sale Inquiry Ends

House Unit Hears 2 Board Members Differ on Serving Of Drinks at Bars

The House subcommittee investigating liquor licensing in the District concluded its inquiry yesterday with the testimony of two members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason and William P. Meredith.

Chairman Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said that an executive session would be called shortly to begin a report to the full District Committee.

Due to the lateness of the session, no request is expected to be made for funds to employ special counsel and investigators.

Mrs. Mason came out flatly against the substitution of a Government-owned dispensary system for privately owned package stores in Washington.

She also opposed a suggestion of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, that the old-time bar be restored so that a man could get a drink standing up.

Adoption of a dispensary system, Mrs. Mason said, would throw many persons out of employment and would not benefit the District financially.

The present requirement that a person be seated before being served with liquor has "worked very well," Mrs. Mason said, and there is no reason for changing it.

Meredith, however agreed with Maj. Brown that a bartender would be able to determine better whether a customer is intoxicated if bars were restored.

Mrs. Mason and Meredith both suggested an earlier closing time for retail liquor stores. The commissioners now have authority, she said, to change this closing hour.

Mrs. Mason indorsed a proposal to allow hotels and night clubs to continue serving drinks until 2 a. m. Sunday.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, asked whether the late closing hour would interfere with "church-going habits." Mrs. Mason said she thought not as young people will stay up late on Saturday night regardless of the time of closing the bars.

Silver Spring Bus Terminal Is Dedicated

Merrill Announces New Schedules To Washington

The Capital Transit Co.'s new $56,000 brick-and-steel bus and streetcar terminal on Georgia avenue, near the District line, in Silver Spring, Md., was dedicated last night.

William D. Merrill, president of the company, said schedules effective April 28, would increase express buses to downtown Washington from 121 to 153 and shuttle buses in Montgomery County from 118 to 164. Streetcar schedules, he said, would be approximately the same as at present, with 165 daily, but midnight-to-dawn cars would run half-hourly.

Walter C. DeGroot, chairman of the transportation committee of the Allied Civic Groups of Silver Spring, said "We are highly gratified with the type of terminal erected and we believe the schedules to be inaugurated April 28 to be the best in the history of Silver Spring."

Besides Merrill, company officials present included Dean J. Locke, staff engineer; Robert Dougan, executive assistant to the president; J. H. Stephens, vice president and transportation manager; W. B. Bennett, secretary; C. Melvin Sharpe, executive assistant to the president; John E. Chrisman, supervisor of traffic, and Isaac B. Goad, supervisor of schedules.

Others present included M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic of the District; Maj. E. Brooke Lee, the Montgomery County Park Commissioner, Lacy Shaw, and presidents of all civic organizations in the Silver Spring area.

Newsom Shackles Nats as Tigers Win, 4 to 2

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3, 1940 X*

Buck Blanks Griffs for Six Innings

Detroit Outhit, 7-6; Washington Weak With Men on Base; Bartell Stars Afield

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Lakeland, Fla., April 2.—The box score says that the Nats outhit the Detroit Tigers today, but don't you believe it. With men on bases the Nats were a feeble gang and the Tigers, with their mere six hits, drove in enough runs to win the ball game, 4 to 2.

Big Buck Newsom, an impish grin on his face despite the torrid heat, contributed to the downfall of his former pals by pitching six scoreless innings for the Tigers in which he allowed only four hits. Their other three hits and their only 2 runs the Nats extracted from Tom Seats, a southpaw rookie from Sacramento.

The only satisfaction that could be gleamed by Manager Bucky Harris from the proceedings was the performance of big Joe Haynes, who made an emphatic bid for a regular job with the Nats today. After the Tigers had scored their 4 runs in the first three innings off Rookie Early Wynn, Haynes took over and did a clever jojb.

Haynes Effective

Haynes allowed the Tigers only two hits in his five-inning stretch and pitched four hitless innings. He walked only one batter, and extricated himself nicely from the only trouble he encountered. That was in the fifth inning when, with Tigers on third and first and only one out, he forced Hank Greenberg to pop up and Rudy York to tap a harmless grounder back to the box.

The Nats could scarcely be proud of the manner in which they scored their two runs. One trotted home on a dismal error by Rudy York, and the other scored on an infield out. But in the eighth inning they were the victims not of the Tigers' pitching, but of Infielder Dick Bartell. With one run home, two on base and only one out, Bartell leaped high in the air for a sensational catch of Jimmy Pofahl's line drive and converted it into a double play.

The Tigers didn't dally with Early Wynn, they knocked him loose from two runs in the first inning, but they were heavily abetted by Washington's Gerry Walker, who played a ground ball as if it would bite him

Walker Errs

After Bruce Campbell beat out an infield single, Barney McCosky singled to left and there was a lot of commotion on the bases when Walker let the ball roll through his legs to the fence. Campbell scored all the way from first and McCosky pulled up at third. A fellow named Hank Greenberg sort of singled to left after that and drove in McCosky. Wynn escaped further damage because York and Higgins hit into force plays.

On only one hit, the Tigers came up with two more runs off Wynn in the third. Campbell drew a walk, went to second when Early made a low throw in trying to pick him off first, and then McCosky delivered again. This time he lined a three-bagger to center to score Campbell. Wynn caused Greenberg to pop out in this crisis, but York produced a long fly to right that got the second run of the inning home.

Then, at the start of the fourth, Haynes took charge and for the remainder of the game the Tigers achieved exactly nothing.

Weak in Clutch

The Nats put two runners on base in the first inning, but not with their bats. West drew a walk from Newsom and with two out, Walker was hit in the back. Travis grounded to Newsom for the third out.

Lonesome singles by Pofahl and Lewis were the Nats' only contributions in the second and third, but in the fourth they filled the bases with one out and muffed an inviting scoring chance. Travis singled to left and Bloodworth moved him to third with a single to right center. But with none as yet out, Pofahl fouled out; Jake Early drew a walk, but the threat collapsed when Wynn popped up and West grounded out.

Sophomores Hold Key to Hoya Grid Success

Last Year's Frosh Crop Must Fill End And Fullback Posts; Hagerty Must Shift Men to Build a Formidable Team

For the third successive season sophomores will hold the key to the success of the Georgetown football team in 1940, Coach Jack Hagerty indicated yesterday as his charges completed their second day of spring training at the Hilltop.

Lacking experienced ends and fullbacks, Hagerty is depending heavily on a number of promising prospects up from last year's powerful and undefeated freshman club.

The unexpected loss of Bob Kercher, a junior and an All-District end in 1937, leaves the Hoyas with only one tried and proven wingman, Mike Kopcik, who at present is out of school recovering from an infected arm. John Lascari and Al Lujack, both juniors, saw enough action last season to earn letters but neither was consistent.

The fullback situation is even more grave, for Senior Jim Castiglia is the only candidate for the position, Myron Darmohray being listed for June graduation. Conceding Castiglia the regular berth for the time being, Hagerty plans to shift John Barrett, star freshman halfback, to fullback, as his understudy. A rugged 185-pounder with plenty of drive, Barrett is expected to fill the bill.

Sophomore-to-be ends of whom much is expected are Chris Pavich, a small wiry lad of only 165 pounds, and tall Dave Wiley. Both were standouts last season, particularly on offense where they starred as pass catchers.

Jim Vernon, Two Other Nats Fall Before Pruning Knife

Orlando, Fla., April 2.—First Baseman Jimmy Vernon was one of four Washington players dispatched to the minors today as Clark Griffith wielded the pruning knife in the Nats' camp.

QUICK

Vernon was sent to the Jersey City club of the International League, a Giants' farm. Griffith denied that the deal had any connection with a rumored trade with the Giants which would bring Zeke Bonura to the Nats.

"We don't want Bonura," reiterated Griffith. "Jersey City needed a first baseman and it was a good opportunity for me to give Vernon some experience in a Class AA league. I can recall him on 24-hour notice in an emergency. Some day Vernon will be a fine ball player for us."

Vernon's departure leaves Jimmy Wasdell as the lone first baseman on the Washington roster. Acceptable enough defensively, Vernon did not boast the batting power expected of Wasdell. He batted .259 in 60 games for the Nats last year after being a star in the South Atlantic and Eastern leagues.

Shortstop Hal Quick and Pitcher Bill Holland were returned to the Springfield club, a Washington farm, in other developments today. Pitcher Early Wynn was sent to the Nats' Charlotte farm.

Later tonight Griffith suddenly announced that Quick was being retained with the Nats temporarily. The Nats' owner explained that Buddy Myer was entraining tomorrow for Washington, where he will undergo a minor operation which may keep him out of the line-up for a few days beyond the April 16

Bobby Jones Shoots Six-Under-Par Round

Big Gallery at Augusta Sees 'Old Master' Revive Memories of 'Grand Slam' Days in Practice for National Tournament; Score Is 66

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., April 2.—The master of Augusta still is the master of every shot. Before the biggest and most enthusiastic gallery of this practice day for the coming Augusta National Golf Tournament, Bobby Jones shot a 6-under-par 66 today to bring back vivid memories of the Jones of old.

Almost shunted to the sidelines of his own tournament by a back ailment in recent weeks, Bobby has bounced up again and is hitting the ball as handsomely as he ever did. When he completed today's round over the course he designed himself, he had played his last 27 holes in an even 100 strikes, and was eight under par for that distance.

The Pride of Georgia teamed up with Charley Yates, the lad who once looked like his successor, against Horton Smith and Bud Ward, the National Amateur champion. This latter was the combine that had won the St. Augustine pro-amateur tournament. But this time they were up against more than they could handle as Yates backed Bobby's 66 with a 68 of his own to bring in a 4-and-3 victory.

From the way the gallery acted, you'd have thought Bobby was back trying for a repeat of that fabulous 1930 "grand slam." They cheered him all the way around, and on this beautiful, summer-like afternoon the sound of their applause echoed and reached out to wherever others in the masters' field were making their shots.

They're all pulling for him. There's nothing the paid-to-play boys would like better than to see Bobby shoot a 66 or 67 in the opening round on Thursday.

"They'd move the whole city of Atlanta over here, and you wouldn't be able to pack 'em all onto the course," said Open Champion Byron Nelson, who had a 66 of his own while taking two Argentine invaders, Martin Pose and Enrique Bertolino, on a tour of the handsome layout.

Nelson and Jug McSpaden, who had met the visitors on South American tours in recent years, took them under their wings. With some expert coaching in pidgin English and halting Spanish, Pose, the Argentine and French Open champion, and Bertolino, P. G. A. titleholder at home, played the back nine in one-under-par 35's after having a bit of trouble getting started.

Rangers Beat Bruins, 2-1, In Overtime

Alf Pike's Counter Wins First Game For Stanley Cup

By the Associated Press

New York, April 2.—Alf Pike, New York Ranger rookie who came close to being the goat of the first game of the Stanley Cup hockey finals, emerged as the hero tonight when he scored a goal after 15 minutes and 30 seconds of "sudden death" overtime play to give the Rangers a 2-to-1 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs.

It was Pike whose misplay in the first period had cost the Rangers a possible chance to end the first game of the final round within the regular three periods. But he more than made up for this error in the eyes of the crowd of 12,437 when he blasted a beautiful shot past Turk Broda, the Toronto goalie, to bring the game to an abrupt end.

Lynn Patrick drew an assist on the winning tally but it was Pike, a first-year man in big league hockey and rated only as a spare forward with the Rangers, who did most of the work. He picked up the puck in the center zone, passed to Patrick at the blue line and received a return pass just as he hit the Toronto defense. Bingo Kampman tried to stop him but was too late as Pike got off a high, hard shot that sailed under Broda's arm before the goalie could make a move.

Winner Gets Smart Ride By Nick Wall

Beats Como No Late Challenge and Pays a $5.10 Ticket; Clingendaal Is Third

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April .—The red, with white diamonds, colors of the Millsdale Stable, batted 1,000 here today as Trainer P. F. Dwyer saddled two horses and Jockey Nick Wall hustled both to the finish line in front. One of the victories came in the Choptank purse, a $1,200 sprint of 5½ furlongs, serving feature purposes, and was the work of Airflame, 6-year-old son of Ariel.

Airflame, showing a keen liking for the track, led all the way but Jockey Wall had to dig deep in his bag of riding tricks to keep the veteran going long enough to win by a head over Gustave Ring's Como No. It was the second feature race defeat by the same margin for the Ring Stable, trained by Buster Bedwell. Clingendaal, in the colors of the A. C. C. Stable, was third in the field of eight.

8,000 Out for Sport

The New Orleans-owned Airflame was purchased from A. G. Vanderbilt at Pimlico last fall and won his first outing at Santa Anita last December. Today's triumph was his first this year in three outings. His time of 1:07 was creditable.

The meeting here settled into week-day stride after yesterday's gala opening and a crowd of 8,000 reported to battle the bangtails. Well-played horses clicked in most instances and the increased betting of the first day continued under perfect racing conditions.

Airflame and Double Back came out of the Bahr gate together, but the Millsdale speedster soon had a clear lead. Double Back's threat failed to last and Morcarine moved up on the outside leaving the backstretch. This one could not keep up with Airflame and slid back. Meanwhile, Como No had been under restraint.

Victor Pays $5.10

In the stretch, Como No, given his head, made a bold rush at Airflame. The Millsdale horse apparently wanted to "dog it," but Jockey Nick Wall had other plans. He went to work and Como No hung, the rivals finished with their heeds lapped and there was no need for the photo called for by the judges.

Airflame paid $5.10 in the role of the favorite.

The Millsdale Stable's first winner came in the concluding second half of the daily double and, like Airflame, was a favorite. Belle High turned in an excellent race to win by a length from the A. C. C Stable's Hi-Kid, with Winter Sea in third position in the field of ten going 6 furlongs. Belle High paid $4.90 and completed a $53.90 daily double.

The first half of the double went to M. R. Waugh's Pete's Frince under a good ride by Jockey George Oros. He bounced home two lengths in advance of Brown Flower, the favorite, which was poorly handled by Jockey Johnny Gilbert. Hy-Happy was third. Pete5s Prince, shipped here from New Orleans, paid $11.80.

Hazel W. Wins

Maryland colors survived the tightest finish of the meeitng in the third race. Watt Elliott's Hazel W. came out of the maiden ranks to win by a nose over Knitetta, with Sealoch and Bully Time in the thick of the blanket finish. Hazel W. ran a courageous race and paid $10 under the handling of Jockey Al Schmidl.

The eighth favorite of the meeting scored in the fifth race, when Presidential came from behind to win by a length from Jinx Buster, a long shot. Greedan was third in the field of six, going a mile and a sixteenth. The winner paid $4.10.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Lakeland, Fla., April 2.—Here we go off the deep end again with the prophecy that as far as the Nats' 1940 catching is concerned everything is going to be Jake—Jake Early.

POVICH

Rick Ferrell hasn't resigned from the Washington club and nominally he still holds the No. 1 catching job, but there is more than a suspicion down here that the designation of Ferrell as the Nats' first-string catcher is merely honorary. Unless all signs fail, the Early bird is going to get the job.

Sure, this seems all very sudden. Jake Early was a horrible green-pea a year ago when he was in the Nats' Orlando camp. And he was no great shucks throughout last season, despite the fact that he was carried by the Nats the entire year. Manager Bucky Harris tolerated him in only 32 games, and at the end of the season the Nats' catching situation was still regarded as one of Harris' chief problems.

Behind the bat, Rick Ferrell was excellent protection. But with the bat, Ferrell was something else again, and his slowness on the bases labeled him as an extreme double-play threat. Harris wanted more hitting power from his catcher and when he looked in the direction of Jake Early last season he saw nothing to contribute to his joy on that score.

But that was last season. This is another year, to coin a phrase. All of a sudden Early has blossomed as a tremendous threat with the bat. At this writing, he is the most dangerous hitter on the club with the exception of the stylist, Cecil Travis. Jake Early has sprouted as a character to be reckoned with.

He can't catch with Rick Ferrell. Precious few catchers can. But Jake is developing nicely. The season he spent on the Nats bench in close proximity to big league catchers, was tonic to his confidence. There's an obvious self-assurance as Jake now goes behind the bat. Perhaps Bennie Bengough has made a big leaguer out of him.

Bengough has been working diligently with Early, and Jake has been a faithful student, long after the rest of the team left the field, Early could be seen chasing the high pops Bengough lifted to him in practice. When Bengough would ask "had enough," Jake shook his head. It was the coach who finally quit. "You're as good on pop fouls as I was," said Bengough, "and I was pretty good. I had to be. I was the regular catcher with the Yankees for five years and I couldn't hit a lick."

The item which first attracted the Washington club's attention to the North Carolina boy was his throwing arm, and that has been a source of joy to Bucky Harris ever since. Bucky Harris yearned for the day when Early could supplement his throwing with some catching ability and at least a fair batting average. Even as a rookie in the Nats' camp four years ago, Jake was the best throwing catcher on the Washington club.

And as for his batting, the Nats' bosses are swearing by that. For the first time since Eddie Ainsmith, Jake Early promises to give Washington a catcher who can be placed better than eighth in the batting order. Cliff Bolton used to bat fifth and sixth on occasion, but unless Early's spring form is a flash in the pan, Bucky Harris may be compelled to move him into third, fifth, or even the clean-up spot in the lineup.

Jimmy Wasdell will hit a ball farther than Early when Wasdell connects with his wild swing which otherwise lands him on his head, but there isn't anybody else on the club who can out-drive Early. More important, Jake is a line drive hitter. The other day at Bradenton he hit a three-bagger that traveled 420 feet on the fly, and the next time at bat he actually knocked the second baseman's glove off his hand with a line drive.

Early's improvement at the bat has been sudden. If it is lasting, then he may owe his success as a hitter to Gerald Walker. On the first day in camp, Walker suggested that Early abandon his crouching stance and hit from a stand-up position. "If you want to bend, bend at the knees, not at the waist," said Walker. Early was willing to follow that advice. Since that day, the pitchers have had a horrible time of it getting him out.

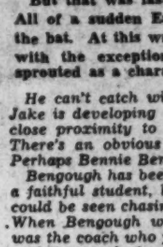
But with all due respect to his coaches, the bulk of the credit to be distributed if Early justifies his spring form must go to the boy himself. Within the year he has taken a firm grip on himself. Every succeeding spring he has been the clown of the Nats' camp. This year he's dead serious. He's married now and he says he wants to build a house and has got to make good. He's already bought the lot.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 2.—Notes so hot—

Ted Williams, who talks like an educated Dizzy Dean, readily admits that Joe DiMaggio, Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg are better hitters than he . . . It's not all willpower and die-for-dear-old-Rutgers that is making Ben Hogan the hottest thing in golf. He practices more than any other pro, in fact he's the only top-line pro today who'll climb into oilskins and practice in the rain—to accustom himself to the vagaries of that kind of golf . . . Pat Comiskey will come back to the ring wars on the Galento-Baer card late this month. He strengthened his broken hands with a glove device with little springs between each finger. Kept spreading and closing his fingers.



CONSIDINE

Tough luck about Greg Mangin, the former national indoor tennis champion. Hit by a car the other night in Newark, N. J., and his leg was badly broken . . . Vinny Richards was much worse broken up, but came back and played as well as ever . . . In fact you could make up a great galaxy of champions who overcame grievous trouble: Eugene Criqui had a steel plate in his head from a shrapnel wound and a jaw that was part aluminum. Glenn Gunninham was fearfully burned about the legs as a youngster. Baby Arizmendi had infantile paralysis. Tommy Armour lost an eye in the war.

Among he 17 women who have nomnated horses for the Kentucky Derby is Mrs. Damon Runyon, who has entered Tight Shoes . . . If Zeke Bonura goes to Jersey City will it be a move to salve the feelings of Mayor Hague—who is still sore about Bill Terry's "raids" on the Jersey City team? . . . Argentina's two leading golf pros, Martine Pose and E. Bertilino, arrived today to play in the Masters' Tournament at Augusta.

A minute after the dazed and distressed Johnny Paychek was led back to his dressing room the other night, a belated messenger arrived with a whole fist full of telegrams, wishing him good luck and predicting he'd win . . . At the ringside on the night of the fight, as a guest of John S. Brooks, jr., was the fabulous Texas cowboy-statesman, Representative Richard Kleberg. Kleberg, co-owner of the million and a quarter acre King Ranch, which sprawls over four huge Texas counties, reports that his famed Santa Anita Derby winner, Ciencia, has been bred and will have her foal early next winter. Kleberg's election to Congress gave the Democrats an advantage of one vote in 1931. His house once was 30 miles from his gate and one of the fences on his property is 90 miles long. He once gave a railroad 250,000 acres to help it along and has sold as many as 16 trainloads of Brahma steers (that many would form a 21-mile line) at one time. He built an airport to welcome his friend, the late Will Rogers.

The opening game at Crosley Field in Cincinnati is already a complete sell-out . . . But a record along these lines—for professional sport at least—is being set by the Washington Redskins. Today, six months before the pro football season starts, 7,500 season tickets have been sold to Redskin games. There isn't a seat left in the upstairs covered stands at Griffith Stadium from the leftfield bleachers to home plate. The Redskins are a great success story. Their total advance sale on season's tickets before the opening of their first year in Washington was 953. By the opening of the 1938 season it had jumped to 3,300. Last year it reached 4,700.

Joe McCarthy says that Tommy Henrich is pressing too much to be a first class ball player . . . The reason you recognized so few of the names of those girl golfers in the North-South Women's Tournament is that the perennial stand-bys were afraid to go there. A U.S.G.A. big-wig—a stickler for amateurism—was in charge of the tournament; and some of the girls have worse records for shamateurism than tennis bums . . . Our one best bet: Paul Dean to be back on the farm by May 31.

Miller Retires After Knockout

Cincinnati, April 2 (AP).—Freddie Miller, once recognized as featherweight champion by the national boxing association, hung up his gloves today. He lost last night to Herschel Joiner of Cincinnati in an eight-round technical knockout.

Miller said he is retiring from the ring. Twenty-nine years old, he has fought 14 years in many parts of the world.

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

Cliff Spencer Chooses 16th as Toughest Hole At East Potomac

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

If you think the worst is over when your tee shot settles around the 250-yard mark on the sixteenth hole at East Potomac—the old seventh hole of D course—well, guess again. Because another long shot, brassie or spoon, stares you right in the face.

The object is to reach the green in two shots, but unless you can clout the ball like the pair of long-hitters in the picture, Cliff Spencer, professional at the Hains Point layout, and Tommy Doerer, jr., manager, you'd better depend on a chip and a putt for a par 4.

The distance is 460 yards, and Doerer wasted little time in leading us to the long par 4 when we brought up the "hardest hole" question.

Hash and Galehouse Give Up 11 Hits But Scatter Them; Cardinals Win, 9-1

Columbia, S. C., April 2.—A big fifth inning gave the Boston Red Sox another exhibition victory over the Cincinnati Reds today, 6 to 3.

After Bucky Waters had retired two on easy chances, Roger Cramer and Ted Williams singled to provide a homerun set-up for Jimmy Foxx. Jimmy delivered.

Joe Cronin followed with a double and a couple of infield hits brought him around.

N. J. Race Meetings In 1940 Held Remote

Newark, N. J., April 2 (AP).—After a closed conference with a New York State horse racing executive, the State Racing Commission indicated today chances for New Jersey meetings in 1940 appeared remote, but stressed it was not opposed to any "practicable plans" for racing this year.

Chairman Louis A. Reilly, at the conclusion of the commission's first business session at which six applications for tracks were received, said "we are moving with caution. It is our intention to go slow and seek the advice of those who have had experience in racing."

Daughters of Sire Who Died Yesterday

Mowlee, Maryland Sire, Drops Dead

Mare Presents Him With Daughter; Mowlee Filly Wins at Bowie Track; Horse Keels Over in Stall on Farm

By Walter Haight

April 2, 1940 is a day Alan Clarke will not soon forget. At 3:20 a. m. Clarke assisted the mare, Kaloa, in the delivery of a sturdy little filly. At 11:10 a. m. Clarke stood by helpless as Mowlee, sire of that foal and many others, died. At 3:34 p. m. Hazel W., a daughter of Mowlee, survived a four-way photo finish, to win the first race of her career.

This morning Clarke, who left the Huntington Farm of his ancestors to have an eventful career in professional baseball and then returned to become a horse breeder, will help lower Mowlee into a grave on the hill that he has populated with rollicking hoofs in the last six years.

Mowlee is dead. He had been a bit fretful for a week. Yesterday morning, Clarke found his food untouched. He turned the horse out in his private paddock. Mowlee romped, not with all the zest of days when he was feeling much better, but he did have exercise. After two hours, Clarke returned him to his stall under the big barn. Mowlee keeled over almost immediately and died before a veterinarian could arrive. A heart attack was believed the cause of his death.

Won $37,000

Mowlee was 15 years old and was owned by Mrs. Chester Lyons, of Waynesboro, Pa. In his racing days, he carried the colors of the Rancocas Stable, owned by Harry Sinclair. Mowlee raced in stake company and accounted for more than $37,000 in winnings, and won at practically all distance from 4 furlongs to a mile and an eighth.

He was retired to Mrs. Lyons' farm when Clarke, seeking a studhorse, became interested in him and persuaded his owner to allow him to stand at Huntington. Mowlee's stock has gained momentum. From a modest start with ordinary mares, Mowlee has since gotten better chances. He has consistently turned out winners, more than 85 per cent of all his get has finished in front of the field. Although horsemen once doubted the ability of Mowlee colts and fillies to go a distance, Clarke can point proudly to their record of having won from virtually every recognized distance from 4½ furlongs to 3 miles.

Foremost Son

General Mowlee perhaps is his foremost son. He has proved himself definitely a stake horse. He has since passed out of Clarke's hands, and the breeder had hoped Linton Nell's foal this spring would be a full brother. However, the mare dropped a filly. An unnamed colt out of Bubola, now 2 years old, may be the one to carry on the Mowlee strain at Huntington Farm. If anything should happen to him, Clarke then will place his hopes in a full brother of that colt publicized in last Sunday's Post as "a runnin' fool, at 8 days old."

The passing of Mowlee was more than the loss of a valuable horse.

Handled Mowlee Personally

"I'm glad of one thing," said Clarke last night while moving his head from side to side, "I don't believe I ever mistreated Mowlee. I always handled him myself. I knew him, and he knew me. I can hardly realize he has gone."

Mowlee's death will change a lot of horse plans in addition to those of Clarke. Thirty mares, many already at Huntington, will be shipped to other farms for breeding. Clarke had already bred Mowlee to five mares this spring. He said last night that due to the lateness of the season he would not attempt to replace Mowlee this year. He may race the Mowlee-Bubola colt and several other 2-year-olds.

April 2, 1940—Yes, there's more to racing than that $2 window.

U. S. H. A. Five Set Season Pin Record

Office Service's 603 Paced by Gustavson With 144 and 361

Office Service, paced by E. F. Gustavson's high game and high set of 144 and 361, established a season bowling record for the United States Housing Authority League last night with a set of 60[illegible] at Lucky Strike Alleys.

In the Ladies Catholic League, Jennie Egan, of St. Anthony's A team, rolled 138 for high game, and Helen Sullivan, of St. Gabriel's, posted 320 for high set. St. Anthony's A, rolling high team game of 548, took the odd one from Holy Comforter A.

Stanley Weiner fiof B'nai B'rith, uncorked a 142 for high game in the Distributor's League, and Meyer Weinberg had high set of 365. Stover's 595 was good for high team game. B'nai B'rith and Friendship continued in a tie for the league lead as each dropped two games, to Stover and International, respectively.

CHEVY CHASE ALLEYS

Hot Shoppes bowlers won the championship with the highest total number of pins in the Chevy Chase Commercial League, despite the fact they lost two to Cherner Motors, which finished second. Cherner rollers had high team set of 1,768.

Equitable Life had high team game, 613, and Irish Dey, of Equitable, had high individual set of 406. Bill McCambridge, of Royale Tavern, had high individual game, 151.

The Izaak Walton League, at its convention last week-end in Chicago, chose Washington as the site of its 1941 meeting, which will be held sometime in the spring with an attendance of between 300 and 500 members.

Harvard Beaten, 14-0, In No-Hit, No-Run Classic; 11 Struck Out

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., April 2.—Pitchers Bob Vickery, Bob Weaver and Bill Mock each took a third interest in Duke's no-hit, no-run game against Harvard's Ivy League co-champions here this afternoon. Duke won 14-0.

The Blue Devil hitters put on their greatest barrage of the season, clubbing out 18 hits, seven of them for extra bases.

Burgess Ayres, Harvard's starting hurler, belted a line drive to left-center in the sixth that looked for a moment like a hit, but George McAffee dropped the ball as he slipped and fell. Otherwise Duke played errorless ball.

Only other Harvard boys to get on base were the six who were given walks. Just one reached third and he got there on consecutive walks and an infield out. With two on and one away, Mock whiffed the next two. A total of 11 Harvard hitters went down swinging.

The score:

Harvard	000 000 000	0	0 4
Duke	400 031 15x	14	18 1

Furr-McDowell Return Bout Is Sought

Another Full House Likely; Promoter to Match Silva, Guggino

Cheered by a sudden revival in the fight business and a record-setting attendance at the Phil Furr-Wild Bill McDowell fight, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday began negotiations for a return bout for a date late this month.

At the same time, it was announced that Mexican Joey Silva will fight Carl Guggino, local lightweight, in a 10-round headline bout on next Monday night's card in the W street arena.

McDowell, who upset the Washington eighth-ranked welter, currently holds the coveted place in the first ten 147-pound contenders, and a rematch probably would draw another packed house.

With his plans for a heavyweight bout between Jorge Brescia and Buddy Scott gone askew as the result of a cold contracted by Scott, Turner is especially anxious to line up McDowell and Furr for a return 10-rounder. The fight was toe-to-toe action all the way, and there was a minority opinion that Furr should have won. Scott and Brescia were to fight laite this month, the winner to meet Pat Comiskey in an outdoor show.

Strang Ready For N. C. A. A. Title Fights

By the Associated Press

Sacramento, Calif., April 2.—Eight college teams, led by the defending champions of the University of Wisconsin, arrived today for the National Intercollegiate Boxing Tournament which opens here Thursday.

Off the train stepped 44 title-seeking fighters from Catholic University, Washington State College, Superior State College of Wisconsin, University of Virginia, Pennsylvania State, Universities of Miami and Florida, and Wisconsin.

Strang Represents C. U.

From Catholic University came Gerry Strang, 165-pound candidate for the national senior middleweight crown won last year by his teammate from Washington, D. C., Fred Stant.

Virginia's four representatives included Dick Williams, 145 pounds; Truman Southall, 155 pounds; Fenton Somerville, 165 pounds, and Ken Rathbun, 175 pounds.

L. S. U. Favorites

Louisiana State remained the favorite to win the group championship as the tournament rules committee arranged to conduct the drawing tomorrow for the three-day event.

I. F. (Crip) Toomey, athletic director of the host California Aggies, was elected committee chairman to succeed W. H. Cowell, of New Hampshire University. T. M. Carruthers, of Virginia, took Toomey's place as secretary.

George Little, Rutgers athletic director and committee member, predicted there would be "very few changes" if any, in the National Collegiate Boxing Rules.

Public Health Service Gun Club Chartered

The United States Public Health Service Gun Club of Washington has been granted a charter by the National Rifle Association, it was announced yesterday. The new member has an enrollment of 70 members.

Its officers are Bernard J. Cassidy, 2817 Thirteenth street northeast, president; Willard R. Piggott, 204 East Broad street, Falls Church, Va., executive officer, and Antonio C. Bonanno, secretary, of 4013 Fourteenth street northwest.

Brookman Ready for Magro Scrap

Now a Father, El Determined to K. O. Foe in Riverside Bout

If determination means anything, El Brookman's eight-round battle with Birmingham's Sammy Magro April 10 at Riverside Stadium may steal the show from Steve Mamakos and Izzy Jannazzo, who fight the 10-round main event.

The youthful Washington welterweight was dashing about town yesterday pressing cigars on startled friends and announcing that he's a father.

A 7½-pound son was born to El's pretty wife Monday night in Providence Hospital, and Brookman, who recently upset Toby Tobias here, said he's going to be in there with one intention—a knockout.

From the looks of Magro, who has knocked out such veterans as Cowboy Howard Scott, Battling Burroughs, Lou Jallos, Lew Raymond and Baby Manuel, it looks like a bad night for the Washington fighter. In his workouts at Huron gymnasium, Magro has shown one of the best right-hand punches seen here in several years.

Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin yesterday jubilantly announced a brisk advance sale for his inaugural fight show in Riverside Stadium. Plans are being made for 5,500 capacity in the ice hockey Eagles' ice hockey stamping grounds.

Jannazzo, world's fifth-ranking welterweight, will be in town Sunday to conclude his training for the fight a week from today. Mamakos is working out at the National Guard Armory daily.

Kansas Students Have Plan to End Goal Post Battles

Lawrence, Kans., April 2 (AP).—Kansas University and Kansas State College student representatives have worked out a scheme they hope will end goal post battles after football games.

They will have a pair of miniature goal posts made of brass and award the trophy to whichever school wins the annual game.

If there is a fight anyway, the schools will pay each other's losses.

Rough Time and Sun Egret Renew Old Feud Today at Bowie

Rivals Seek $5,000 Prize In Rowe 'Cap

Both Assigned 122 Pounds; Only Four Other Horses Named For 6-Furlong Race

By a Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 2.—One of the turf's greatest rivalries will have another renewal tomorrow when Yancey Christmas' Rough Time and the A. C. C. Stable's Sun Egret meet for the thirteenth time in two years. The fact that these two are seeking the main portion of the $5,000 added Rowe Memorial Handicap is one reason that only six horses were named overnight for the 6-furlong sprint. Others scheduled to march postward are the Millsdale Stable's Silent Host, Gustave Ring's Rhumba Gus, Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud and Jouett Shouse's Arden Lass.

However, the Rough Time-Sun Egret angle is enough to make this a keenly contested stake. In the past two years, these rivals have met on five different race tracks and both are Maryland owned. When it came to a question of weights between them, even John B. Campbell, considered the dean of the Nation's racing secretaries, failed to separate them. He gave them the like top assignments of 122 pounds.

Nor is the Rough Time-Sun Egret rivalry confined to the race track. Christmas, of course, trains Rough Time, and Guy Bedwell trains Sun Egret. Thus the relative merits of the two ace sprinters is forever a topic around the secretary's office. The two trainers have entertained horsemen for some time with their pro and con discussions.

Rough Time is the leader in the two-horse battle at this time. The son of Grand Time has finished in front of his rival 7 times in 12 meetings. The problem of separating and assigning weights to them has given headaches to the best handicappers and racing officials.

Checking over the dozen meetings of this pair brings out some interesting facts. Despite their many clashes, the greatest difference in weight has been 4 pounds. In only one race has the distance between them been greater than five lengths. One nose, two heads and a half-length have been some of the margins. Sun Egret is a year younger than his rival, being 5. The A. C. C. Stable star, also is the smaller of the pair, in fact, he is one of the smallest horses in training.

In passing, it is interesting to note that Rough Time and Sun Egret have raced together over 9¼ miles, a quarter miles.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INTERPRETER, $14.30, $7.40, $4.70; PERSONABLE, $6.80, $4.40; BREEZING ALONG, $3.90.
INTERPRETER, not hurried in early stages, improved position gradually after leaving half pole to dispose of PERSONABLE without effort and was drawing out at end. PERSONABLE was rated while running with ALARMING in early stages, opened a good lead, but weakened when displaced. BREEZING ALONG, outrun for half, came willingly under pressure at close. NANCY MAE saved ground to improve position, but was not a serious factor. HIGH TENSION ran a dull race.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:20. Off 5:20. Winner, W. N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FILANDRO, $4.90, $3.80, $3.70; TROUT STREAM, $26.00, $14.10; COUNTER PASS, $10.40.
FILANDRO forged to front going to first turn, drew out gradually, but was kept to drive through stretch. TROUT STREAM moved up gradually, saved ground at final turn and closed with excellent courage. COUNTER PASS, lacking early speed as usual, came boldly in final stages to be going fastest of all. BRILLIANT ONE, rated while close up to stretch, faltered thereafter.

——At the Post

Dear Al:

The boys around Benning track last winter were looking forward to winning a bet on Clodion, a bad post actor who improves in the new starting gates. However, it will be some time before Clodion will be able to race again. He broke down here the other day. "Jockey No Boy" Jacobs was by to thank me for yesterday's writeup but he had a complaint, too. "Just tell 'em I don't want sympathy. I want 'em to buy pictures of horses. I got 'em for 40 years back," says Jake. The opening day program brought out two facts: (1) That Bowie favorites run a lot better than those at Hialeah. (2) That the Bahr starting gate works O. K. despite the efforts of some people to try to belittle it. There should be no trouble with the gate although some of the horsemen have their fingers crossed on that No. 7 slot. However, the doors swing open a fraction of a second after the bell rings. If the riders are not trying to get out before the doors actually open, everything should be hunkey-dory. The Maryland fans got a good look at Apprentice Charlie Durando although he has ridden before at this track. If memory serves, he won with Olympus here last fall. Durando became quite fashionable in Florida and he looks like the leading apprentice at this meeting. However, Hirsch Jacobs' horses improve any boy. Speaking of Jacobs, he should have a merry battle with Guy Bedwell for training honors. Bedwell has 36 horses to his rival's 18. After seeing the big write-up on his new colt by Mowlee out of Bubola, horse lovers are flocking to Alan Clarke's Huntington farm to see him. Clarke may have to set a time in the afternoon for the colt to be taken to the paddock. I'll see if I can't arrange it. If anyboy's still interested in that Confucius guy, he says: Lady Orchid, a beautiful thing to see.

BILL.

First race—Ring Star makes his first trip postward in the opener and receives the call off reports of speedy morning trials in Florida. Silver Voice raced well over this strip Monday and looms as the logical contention. Lochlea showed promising efforts at Hialeah and might be dangerous.

Second race—Little Mowlee campaigned successfully at Charles Town last winter with this sort and has not been away long enough to seriously impair her chances at this distance. Disraeli was a disappointment last summer, but has shown flashes of good form which gives him a chance with this company. Betrothed is dangerous if fit.

Third race—Irish Moon had early foot in several route races in Florida and with a two-week period of freshening up should be primed for his best in this sprint affair. Schley Goree displayed surprising speed opening day when second to Steel Knight and probably needed the race. Lifelike can better poor recent races.

Fourth race—Blue Marvel indicated his best form when he raced within a half length of Bibliophile at Santa Anita in good time. Grand Pageant bowed to mediocre platers at Oaklawn, but will have the advantage of being fit. Dizzy Dame likes the track and figures into the contention.

Fifth race—Rough Time and Sun Egret figure very evenly in the feature event with Rough Time holding the edge. The latter whipped the Bedwell-trained horse here last fall and both went on to winter racing with indifferent success. Rough Time has shown the better recent form and is accorded the call. Honey Cloud should take care of the others.

Sixth race—Izarra was not persevered with when outmatched by Rawson opening day. In his previous race he won at Oaklawn, indicating top form. Dark Phaona showed one good effort at Santa Anita and would be a strong factor if he runs back to it. White Hope won his last in Florida.

Seventh race—The Jacobs-trained entry of Uvalde and Flushing in the final event appear much the best. Uvalde won here opening day and Flushing raced creditably with better grade campaigners on the Florida circuit. Lady Orchid raced well last start and should improve. Brandon Prince for show.

Best bet—Bieber-Jacobs entry.

THE DOBERMAN PINSCHER

Originated in Germany about 1890 and used in police work or any work where highly specialized training is necessary. An honest dog, uncamouflaged by superflous coat or the wiles of the artful conditioner. One gains at once the impression of sinewy nimbleness; of the quick coordination of the well-trained athlete. This breed will be at the dog shows in Alexandria, April 27, and at Riverside, April 25 and 26

Bird Helps Player Score Basket in Game

Fitchburg, Mass., April 2 (AP).—Jerry Belliveau scored an extra basket last night in a district basketball tournament with the help of a bird.

Belliveau let go a none too accurate toss for the basket in the Y. M. C. A. gym when the bird flew by, bumped into the ball and deflected it through the hoop.

3 Colleges Launch Busy Week-end Sports Card Tomorrow

Hoya, G. W. Nines Play Hosts at 2:30

G. U. Faces Harvard; Buff Opens Season With Dartmouth; 2 Terp Squads in Action

A busy week-end of college sports will begin tomorrow with baseball at George Washington and Georgetown and tennis and lacrosse at Maryland.

Georgetown, victorious over Penn in its first game of the season, is expected to be tested fully by powerful Harvard, cochampion of the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, in their game at 2:30 on the Hilltop Medical School Field.

Meanwhile over on the East Ellipse the first varsity George Washington nine in four years opens up with Dartmouth, which has lost to Maryland and defeated Virginia so far on its Eastern trip.

At 4 o'clock at College Park the Terp netmen inaugurate their campaign with William and Mary while the lacrosse team seeks its second straight victory, playing Harvard.

Hoyas Come Next

Friday Dartmouth's baseball team moves over to the Hilltop to meet the Hoyas. Then on Saturday the spotlight shifts back to College Park, where the Maryland baseball team will engage Pitt and the lacrossmen will come to grips with Loyola of Baltimore. The Maryland track team will be away Saturday, opening its outdoor season with V. P. I. at Blacksburg. The Terps will be without the services of Joe Murphy, Southern Conference 100 and 220 champion, who is recuperating from an attack of flu. Murphy's place will be taken by Kenneth Barnes, who has been showing considerable improvement at the distances.

Harvard, one of the few college baseball teams in the country to defeat Holy Cross last leason, will have its best line-up available for the Georgetown game. Capt. Tom Healey, 200-pound right-handed pitching ace, will start for the Crimson and go the route if he can.

To Choose From Three

The Hoyas plan to use two pitchers who will be chosen from among Vinnie Powers and Bill Wixted, right-handers, and Southpaw John Dieckelman. In the event Harvard presents a batting order dominated by left-handers Dieckelman will be a certain pitching choice. If the Crimson have more orthodox hitters he will be stationed in rightfield to capitalize his potent bat.

Central Nine Wins Over Briarley M. A.

Interhigh Champs Get 15 Safeties; Di Blasi Hits for 'Circuit'

By way of putting fear in the hearts of inter-high foes, Central's defending baseball champions opened their practice game season yesterday with a 24-0 shellacking of a youthful Briarley Hall Military Academy nine in the Mount Pleasant Stadium.

Fifteen hits, including three doubles, a pair of triples and two home runs, were pounded out by the titlists in the five-inning game while the opposition was held hitless. Briarley's two hurlers, Ingberg and Reed, contributed 11 bases on balls toward the cause.

Bill Fisher went the four innings for the Vikings and was responsible for only one man getting to first on a walk. Buckner pitched the last inning and gave up two charity bases, but no hits. The slugging title was taken by Sam Di Blasi, who hit for the "circuit"—two singles, a double, a triple and a homer—in five times at bat. Benny Steiner lacked only a triple for the "circuit," while Pat Fenlon registered a triple and three singles in five times.

Bimlech Seen Sure Derby Entry If Track Is Fast

Palm Beach, Fla., April 2 (AP).—Col. E. R. Bradley, owner of Idle Hour Stock Farm at Lexington, Ky., said today that, barring any accident, his horse, Bimelech, will be a sure starter on a fast track in the Kentucky Derby May 4.

He made the statement to refute a recent report that Bimelech's training was lagging.

Col. Bradley said he had just received a letter from the trainer at the barn who said the horse was in excellent condition.

"If for any reason something unforeseen happens that we will have to scratch Bimelech from the Derby, newspapers will be notified immediately," the owner declared.

Col. Bradley, enjoying good health, had just returned from a drive around Palm Beach when he made the statement. He plans to leave the middle of April for his Lexington home, where he will watch the final preparation of Bimelech for the Derby on the Idle Hour training track.

Royal Mail Injured

London, April 2 (AP).—Mrs. C. Evans' Royal Mail, winner of the Grand National Steeplechase in 1937, strained a ligament in training today and was declared out of Friday's running of the classic. He was to have carried 169 pounds in this year's National.

Bethesda Upset in First Schoolboy Golf

Bladensburg Takes 6-3 Margin; McKinley Trounces Anacostia

Bethesda's defending champions in the Metropolitan sector of the Schoolboy Golf League were upset by Bladensburg, 6 to 3, yesterday at Manor, as four matches inaugurated both sections of the league.

Tech showed improvement over last year by doubling the score on Anacostia at Washington Golf and Coutry Club, 6 to 3, in the inter-high division, while the Western-Wilson match at Kenwood was postponed.

In other "Met" matches, Gonzaga, touted as the potential winner of the suburban and prep school sector, defeated Blair, 7-2, at Beaver Dam, while St. John's scored, 7-2, over Devitt, at Army and Navy.

The boys, with little practice this season, scored high, with a 79 by Burgess, Tech captain, the best score reported. In the third foursome of that match, Lowry, of Anacostia, defeated Lohman, 4 and 3, and playing the best ball of Lohman and Talbert, and lost only 1 up. Talbert won his match by forfeit.

Bethesda swept all three points over Bladensburg in the first foursome but the Prince Georges County team came back to win the next six points and the match. Blair's only winners against Gonzaga were Clark and McKeney, in the first and last matches.

Tech, 6; Anacostia, 3

Burgess (Tech) defeated Hunt, 6 and 4; Briskett (A.) defeated Harris, 9 and 7. Best ball, Tech, 3 and 2.

Holland is being returned to Springfield without having pitched as much as nine innings in the Nats' camp this spring. A southpaw lacking control, he never was highly regarded by the Nats.

Within a few days, Griffith will announce that Pitcher Paul Gehrman has been returned to the minors. Both the Toledo and Birmingham clubs are seeking the big right-hander for whom Griffith paid the $6,00 draft price last year. He failed to make a single impressive performance in the Nats' camp and will be sold outright.

Joe Louis Has Slipped, Says Benny Leonard

Hazleton, Pa., April 2 (AP).—Although his protege, Johnnie Paychek, was knocked out in the second round by Champion Joe Louis in Madison Square Garden Friday, Benny Leonard still maintains that the Brown Bomber has slipped from the form he showed when he first became champion.

The retired lightweight champion here to referee in a boxing show last night, believes wealth and soft living have taken their toll of Louis. He declared that Louis had to knock Paychek down three times before he could finish him.

Terp Golfers Lose to Cornell Despite DeWitt and Murphy

First Match of Season Dropped, 5½-3½; Meister Shoots Par

Maryland University golfers dropped a 5½-3½ decision to Cornell in the first match of the season yesterday at Beaver Dam, but George DeWitt and Julian Murphy, the two Terp stars, came through with victories.

DeWitt, playing in the No. 1 position, defeated Sterling, 1 up, while Murphy scored over Evans, 3 and 2, as third man. Bill Rea lost to Meister, of the visitors, who matched par figures. The Terps split even in the best-ball play, but lost four of the six individual matches.

Cornell, 5½; Maryland, 3½

DeWitt (Md.) defeated Sterling, 1 up; Bill (Cornell) defeated Kimball, 4 and 3. Best ball all even, ½ point each.

Meister (Cornell) defeated Rea, 1 up; Bostwick (Cornell) defeated Harmon, 6 and 5. Best ball, Cornell, 4 and 3.

Murphy (Md.) defeated Evans, 3 and 2; Giles (Cornell) defeated Wade, 4 and 3. Best ball, Maryland, 1 up.

Sharkey's 72 Wins Hoya No. 1 Berth

F. X. Van Herpe was next with 38-35, 73, while Johnny Burke was an easy qualifier with 37-38, 75. Joe McBride qualified with 39-36, 75, while Billy Shea was fifth with 40-38, 78, and Dick Hearty next, 41-38, 79. Ray Higgins missed with an 80 while Frank Galvin and Dick Harris had 81 each.

The team will qualify Saturday for the regular eight-man team for the Eastern League matches.

Potsy Clark Plans New Grid 'Runback' Rule

Pro Lions' Mentor Wants Penalty for Team 'Downing Ball'

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, April 2.—Coach Potsy Clark, of the Detroit Lions of the National Football League, will submit at the pro circuit's annual meeting here this month a new rule to improve the runback of punts.

"The return of punts should be one of the game's most valuable and spectacular plays," says Potsy, former Illinois star quarterback and one of the country's outstanding veteran coaches. "But checks on our league's 1939 statistics shows that punts were brought back for average gains of only 5 yards. On many such plays the receiving team didn't have even the chance to touch the ball.

"Much better balance between the two sides could be quickly made on punts if the kicking team was prevented from touching the ball before the receiving eleven had an opportunity to first handle the pigskin. This situation would encourage more runbacks of punts and more thrills."

Under Clark's proposed rule, the kicking side would be penalized 5 yards for touching the ball before it was first handled by the receiving team. The penalty would be imposed at the spot where the kicking team illegally touched the ball.

The Clark rule would quickly stop ends of kicking teams from grounding rolling punts deep in their opponents' territory.

It is unlikely that radical rule changes will be attempted at the league's annual meeting. Club owners are confident the pro game is now the most spectacular and satisfactory type of football played anywhere in the country. Rule changes made at the meeting here will be chiefly for the purpose of eliminating possible "dead" spots.

Otto Reiselt Defeats Hall In Cue Match

Philadelphian Wins, 50-29, in 3-Cushion Title Play in Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 2.—Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, was in rare form today as he defeated Allen Hall, of Chicago, in the world three-cushian billiards tournament, 50 to 29, in 32 innings.

Reiselt scored 33 points in the first 14 innings and appeared headed for a new world's record for lowest number of innings. The present low is 23 frames, but 7 blanks in the next 8 innings blasted his chances.

The schedule called for Reiselt to play Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif., but Hall was substituted when Bozeman fell victim to food poisoning.

Hall got an even break out of the afternoon's two matches, defeating Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, 50 to 41, in 50 innings.

Results of the two games left Reiselt mired in tenth place, Hall in eighth and Denton in ninth.

The eReiselt-Hall inning score:

Reisel—311 200 065 605 130 010 000 030 330 222 01—50. High run, 6; innings, 32.

Bockwinkle Battles Olson On Londos-Cox Mat Card

St. Louis Groan Artist Bemoans Jimmy's Indifference to Challenges

Warren Bockwinkle, 220-pound muscleman from St. Louis, was signed yesterday to meet Cliff Olson in a 30-minute bout tomorrow night at Turner's Arena on the card featuring Jim Londos and Joe Cox.

Hailed by Promoter Joe Turner's agents as "one of the most serious threats to Londos' wrestling title," whatever that title may be, Bockwinkle made his debut last week by throwing Don Evans around much to the delight of the spectators.

Bockwinkle informed Turner he's been trying to get Londos in the same ring with him for months, but that Jim seems reluctant. Turner released the line-up of tomorrow's groan artists yesterday. Preliminaries pit The Golden Terror against Matros Kirilenko, Jack Hader against Hymie Olson, and Tom Zaharias against Abie Kaplan.

Day-Angott Bout Muddle Cleared

Louisville, Ky., April 2 (AP).—Way was cleared for the Davey Day-Sammy Angott lightweight fight here Derby eve, May 3, when Wrestling Promoter Heywood Allen, sr., agreed today to relinquish his lease on the Jefferson County Armory.

The bout is for the National Boxing Association championship.

The Sportsmen's Boxing Club, promoting the 15-round match, immediately began making seating plans for a capacity house scaled to $34,500 on a price range of $5.75 ringside down to $1.25.

To give up the armory, Louisville's largest auditorium, Allen was paid $200 as reimbursement for expenses incurred in negotiating for a Derby eve wrestling match and $102.50 for the down payment of rental he made on the armory.

Westrope's License Suspended for Indefinite Period

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 2 (AP).—The California horse racing board has suspended Jockey Westrope indefinitely but will give him a chance to appeal.

Westrope was suspended during the recent Santa Anita meeting for an "unsatisfactory ride" and subsequently filed a $25,000 suit against the board.

At a meeting last night the board decided that "upon reports made by the stewards on the conduct and unsatisfactory riding record of J. Westrope the board indefinitely suspends Westrope's license and will set a date for him to be heard if he desires a hearing."

Jockeys Ralph Neves and Al Shelhamer also were handed suspensions up to and including April 12 for "rough riding" tactics on the last day of the Santa Anita meeting.

Potomac Hunt to Hold Season's Finale at Edward Beale's Estate

Local hunting folk will have their last fling at point-to-point racing for the season Saturday, when the Potomac Hunt holds its annual meeting at Edward Beale's estate, near Glen, Md.

Spectators will be able to view activities from the top of a hill that overlooks most of the 6 miles of hunting country, over which the three events will be run.

Early entries in the open race include Gerald B. Webb, jr.'s Longitude, already a winner once in Maryland this year when he annexed the Redland Bowl early last month. Another Virginia entry is Crompton Smith, who is vanning one of his highly regarded hunting horses from Middleburg. Smith, now recovering from a broken leg that he received in the Redland race, will have Randy Duffey riding in his steed.

The second race on the card, for "dawdlers and larkers," includes entries from Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicios, who will ride her Shiftless sidesaddle; Mrs. Jones Horgan, Mrs. Robert Maron and numerous others.

The Dunboyne Challenge Cup race, restricted to members of the host hunt, will find young Robin Riddick attempting to repeat her last year's victory on Cheyenna, and Margaret Sanderson, second place winner in 1939, will ride Poussant. Another early entry is Lieut. Col. William Grimes, who is sending his Muddy River postward.

First race is set for 2:30 p. m., rain or shine.

Judge to Toss Out First Ball For Game Sunday

Joe Judge, probably the best Nat first baseman in history, will toss out the first ball Sunday as Cameo Furniture and the Washington Cardinals meet in a sandlot feature at Ballston Stadium at 3 p. m.

It will be the first clash for Cameo this season, following three weeks of intensive training, and it should prove a good yardstick as to the Furniture men's chances in the Industrial League.

Manager Connie Wyche has indicated he will start the "old man of the sandlots"—Lefty McIntire—with Jimmy Schwab doing the catching. Last season McIntire won 18 games and lost only 8. The Cardinals' Manager Tass will probably use Price, former Virginia U. hurler, and Carroll as his starting battery.

Nats Are Beaten By Tigers, 4 to 2

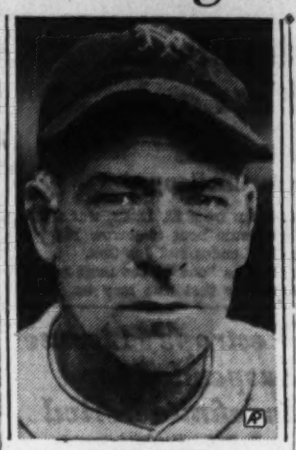
som, the Nats became obstreperous in the eighth and ninth and there was evidence that they might wipe out the Tigers' 4-0 lead. In the eighth, Lewis walked and Walker singled to right with none out, and when Rudy York manhandled Travis' soft grounder for an error, Lewis scored. But Jimmy Bloodworth flied out harmlessly and then Bartell robbed the Nats of further chances by leaping for a line-drive off Pofahl's bat and doubling Walker off second.

In the ninth, there were further signs of a Washington rally after Ferrel led off with a walk. Pinch Hitter Hal Quick grounded into a force play, but Johnny Welaj hit the 340-foot fence in left with a double that put Quick on third. Only one run resulted, however, because Wasdell and Lewis grounded out.

Luque Ends Career, Pitching 3 Innings



ADOLF LUQUE

Former Giant Star Started Hurling In 1914 With Reds

By the United Press

Tampa, Fla., April 2.—One of the most remarkable baseball careers of our time ended on a blistering Sunday afternoon in Havana a few days ago.

Senor Adolf Luque, greatest of all Cuban ballplayers, walked off the hill after pitching three innings for the Cuban All-Stars against the Cincinnati Reds and hung up his glove on a nail in front of the dugout.

"No hay mas," he said. "Luque esta terminado."

He was telling them "That's all, Luque is through. From now on he's a manager."

Luque will be 50 in August and he has been pitching since his 'teens. He was with the Reds in 1914. The first pitch he ever made in the majors was to Hank Gowdy, now coach of the Reds, and that was a long time back.

In addition to managing ball clubs in Cuba, Luque has been pitching a few innings from time to time, but after his three-inning stretch against the Reds, he finally admitted the old arm was gone. Luque didn't do so badly—giving up three runs and five hits during his tenure.

Later that night he met a Cincinnati scribe, Tom Swope, who saw Luque break into the majors.

"I am just washed up, Tom," he said. "I tell you my arm is so sore now I can hardly raise it. I won't be able to sleep all night."

Luque once was one of the greatest righthanded pitchers in the National League. One season he pitched 27 victories for the Reds, and several seasons he was over the 20-game mark.

His last days in the National League were spent as coach of the New York Giants. He might still be in the league but for Bill Terry. Luque did not like Terry's strong-arm methods. He was coach of the Giants for four years, 1934 through 1937. In the spring of 1934 Terry cabled him: "I give you 24 hours to report to Hot Springs." Luque answered: "Get somebody else to coach, I'm through."

Luque admits Terry is "not dumb" as a manager, but gives him little credit when it comes to trading.

"I remember when the Reds offered Paul Derringer for Hank Lieber a few years ago," Luque said. "Terry asked Pancho Snyder (Giant coach) and me about the deal. I told him to get Derringer and I though he'd win 20 games for the Giants. I believe Snyder told him the same thing.

Georgetown's 'G' Dinner Is Set April 23

Football Squad and Blozis to Be Guests Of Honor at Fete

The fifteenth annual Georgetown University "G" Club dinner, which will especially commemorate the football team's second successive undefeated season and the shot-put records of Al Blozis, will be held Tuesday, April 23, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Introduced in 1923 to a gathering of about 100 guests, the "G" dinner has expanded steadily and last year attracted a capacity crowd of 1,200. Throughout the years the dinner has featured prominent speakers in the world of sports and politics. Among the outstanding sports personalities to address "G" Club dinners were the late Knute Rockne and Bill Ingram, Chick Meehan, Ted Jones, Bill Roper, Wallace Wade, Dr. Jock Sutherland, Mal Stevens, Ossie Solem, Harvey Harmon and Frank Dobson.

Engraved certificates will be awarded all 1939 varsity letter winners.

An exciting duplicate hand is shown in today's box. Neither side knew which was sacrificing, but West had hopes for making any number of hearts with a little luck, so he bid slowly and refrained from showing his spade void. He was rewarded with a double, but not until he had gone as high as six. North opened a spade, and the rest depended upon distribution. Luck was with West; he made the bid, though he held two losing diamonds in his hand. He managed to get rid of dummy's diamonds on his high clubs.

North opened a spade which declarer trumped. He pulled two rounds of trumps after carefully noting he could do so without jeopardizing the club suit. Then he cashed the club ace, ruffed a low club, entered his hand by trumping a spade, and, taking a deep breath, ran his clubs. They had to split 4-3 if he was to make the contract. Under the king, queen and six of clubs, he played three of dummy's diamonds. He conceded a diamond to the adversaries and ruffed the second losing diamond in dummy. West made six hearts doubled, losing one diamond trick.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington, Tuesday, Apr. 2, 7:30 p. m.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Cloudy, slightly warmer with local showers Wednesday; Thursday showers; gentle to moderate southeast, shifting to south winds.

For Maryland—Cloudy and warmer with light showers Wednesday; Thursday cloudy and warmer followed by showers.

For Virginia—Cloudy, slightly warmer with local showers Wednesday; Thursday partly cloudy and warmer, followed by showers.

Conditions

A disturbance is moving north-northeastward over eastern North Dakota, Sioux City, Iowa, 995.3 millibars (29.39 inches), with a warm front extending east-southeastward to West Virginia and with a trough extending south-southwestward to western Texas. A high-pressure area is moving eastward over the North Atlantic States and the lower lake region, Rochester, N. Y., and Alpena, Mich., 1,024.4 millibars (30.25 inches), with a wedge extending southward to the North Carolina coast. Pressure is relatively high over Florida, Miami, 1,018.6 millibars (30.08 inches). During the last 24 hours rains have occurred in the southern Plateau and in a narrow belt extending from western Virginia northwestward to Minnesota, and rains and snows are reported from the northern Plains States, the northern Plateau and the middle and northern Rocky Mountain region. Temperatures have fallen in eastern North Carolina, in the interior of the West Gulf States, and from eastern Montana southward to eastern New Mexico. Temperatures have risen in the Ohio Valley, Iowa and over the southern Plateau.

Three Traps Are Hazards

Of the 18 reconstructed holes, Doerer picked the sixteenth. He is shown playing a second shot to the green from the spot where an average drive comes to rest. The ball is just short of a trap which is there to stop a tee shot, while two more are set in on the right hand side of the fairway, for the same reason.

A small green is open to a run-up shot only in the front, and unless you can thread a needle from 200 yards, a la Benny Hogan, the best thing to do is try to carry the surrounding traps.

If you're off to the right-hand side of the fairway, best take out an extra ball and play another, as it's out of bounds. And another thing, the breeze off the nearby Potomac River is nearly always in your face on the hole, and in attempting to add a few extra yards you're apt to push it toward the penalty area.

Doerer selected the hole, but he is more proud of a new par 3 he is building on the other nine, that will take its place as one of the best one-shoters on the many layouts.

If Tom's plans to bring Craig Wood and Benny Hogan here for a match in May, we'll watch them on No. 16 and see how the big boys make out.

East Potomac's Toughest Is No. 16

ened up the East Potomac golf program the pas ttwo years with a few tournaments, but the golf course, in its former shape, was hardly a test for a top-notch amateur or professional.

So he conferred with S. G. Leoffler, publinks lessee, and the latter ordered the workmen on the job and and they made the D and B courses into the championship 18, measuring 6,486 yards, with a par of 72. Greens, tees, traps and other hazards were moved. Public links golfers were winning tournament places with scores in the 80s, and the pro sweepstakes scores were all over the par figures. Mel Shorey, who was accustomed ot playing the course in anything from 65 to 70, was up around 74 and 77. The boys are on to the layout a little now. Several of the pros dipped into the 60s last year, but it's still a good test for a course that is as flat as a billfold after opening day at Bowie.

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—Charles W. Schick, 83, past commander of the Illinois department of the American Legion and a leading figure in national legion affairs, died today. He was one of the pioneers in the ex-service men's organization. During the war he served as a naval enrollment officer.

Allies Could End Russian Pact With Nazis, Says British M. P.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Here on Survey, Asserts Trade Agreements Would Break Alliance; Believes Prospects for Early Peace Are Dim

The "Norris of Parliament," an independent laborite in the House of Commons who places convictions above party lines, reached Washington yesterday in the person of Sir Stafford Cripps.

Nearing the end of his globe girdling tour to survey political and economic conditions, he told a press conference that:

Prospects of an early peace in Europe are dim.

The Filipinos want their independence, yet they are looking forward to 1946—when full freedom will be achieved—with trepidation, an eye cocked in the direction of Japan.

Russia's alliance with Germany could be broken by a trade agreement or two between the Soviets on one hand and England and France on the other because "Russia is anxious to stay out of war."

Japanese Liberals, who are nominally in control of the Tokyo government, would like to pull out of China, but the military—real boss—won't have it.

Sir Stafford's visit to Washington is sponsored by Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, a movement which he declared is proving of great value to thousands of refugees, disabled soldiers and civilians.

He will be a luncheon guest of the National Press Club today and of the Barnard Club Saturday.

Custom Smelters Cut Copper Price An Eighth Cent

New York, April 2 (AP).—Sales of copper were made at 11⅛ cents a pound by custom smelters today, a decline of ⅛ cent from the price previously quoted in this field and ¾ of a cent less than the level set by leading primary producers.

Prices have been steadily declining in both the custom and resale markets recently, reflecting slack demand from foreign and domestic users of the red metal.

American Smelting & Refining Co. today reduced the price of lead ½ of a cent to 5 cents a pound. The quotation equaled the year's lowest, February 7. Metal dealers said the lower price was posted to stimulate lagging demand.

Foreign Selling Depresses Cotton 3 to 8 Points

New York, April 2 (AP).—Foreign selling pushed cotton futures back for losses from which the market never fully recovered today. Final prices were down 3 to 8 points.

Bombay was again the chief supply of contracts. Total offerings from overseas were estimated at around 10,000 bales, against 15,000 Monday.

Less active pressure from abroad suggested to some brokers the huge straddle built up between New York and Bombay, a dominant factor in price fluctuations in the local market recently, might be rather well liquidated.

The slump in Bombay, which touched off local selling from the East, put Indian cotton at the widest discounts under New York in years.

Hedging Sales Of Loan Grain Halt Rally

Release of Federal Collateral Supplies Reverses Trend

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 2.—Grain dealers who followed usual marketing practices today sold wheat futures equivalent to their purchases of actual grain, thus depressing prices here and nipping in the bud an attempt to extend the recent rally.

This hedging, by which grain interests protect themselves against reduced prices during their ownership of the commodity, reflected abnormally heavy supplies now coming to market as a result of liquidation of grain which has been stored for months under Government loans. It is very unusual that the futures pit is forced to absorb selling of this nature at this time of year.

The hedging more than offset early purchasing based on unfavorable weather and crop reports and crop reports and after prices had advanced ⅝ cent the market dipped a full cent from the early highs and closed ⅝@¾ lower than yesterday, with May 1.04½@1.04⅝ and July 1.03⅝@1.03¼. Corn was ⅛ off to ⅛ up, May 56¾, July 57¾, oats ⅜@½ lower, rye ¾@1⅛ down and lard 2-8 higher.

$1,500,000 Policy on Disney To Protect Mickey Preferred

By the Associated Press

New York, April 2. — Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Pinocchio trouped through Wall Street today in their strangest adventure of all—a quest for $3,875,000.

The producer of the animated cartoon characters, Walt Disney productions, sought public financing for the first time to provide new permanent capital for expansion.

An underwriting group headed by Kidder, Peabody & Co. offered 150,000 shares of 6 per cent $25 par cumulative convertible preferred stock at $25 a share. Simultaneously, the company offered 5,000 shares to employes at the same price.

An unusual protective feature for the preferred stock is a provision for insuring the life of Disney for ten years for $1,500,000. In the event of his death before April 1, 1944, proceeds of the insurance would be paid in trust for the benefit of the preferred stockholders. In the event of Disney's death after that date, proceeds would be retained by the company.

Of net proceeds from the stock sale, $1,600,000 will be used to pay indebtedness incurred in construction of the company's new plant at Burbank, Calif., and the remainder will pay bank indebtedness incurred for such corporate expenses as picture production.

Only Aviation Stocks Gain Altitude As Market Remains Stagnant at Level Which Best Issues Fail to Surmount

New York, April 2.—The stock market made only minor average changes today and consequently it is still securely locked within the narrow range that has held it for the last few months. The composite average showed a negligent gain of 0.01 point, which meant nothing, but there was some spirited trading in aviations and sugar shares. Trading was moderate, amounting to 834,930 shares.

Influences which shape prices on the stock market were not altered today and consequently the list keeps threatening its upper resistance point but fails to show enough buying enthusiasm to carry it through. The going gets difficult every time the market is lifted into the present zone of supply.

Technicians regard the present situation as technically sound, but unless there is some more surprise news in the near future similar to the steel dividend last week, the list may be delayed for a few more weeks in its attempt to break out of the rut.

Aviation shares, particularly those of the transportaion companies, have been doing more than their share for the bullish forces and they are staging a market all their own. They were features again today, with new highs scored by American Airlines, up 2½; Eastern Air Lines, up a point; Pan American up 2½; T. W. A. up a point, and United Air Lines, up ¾.

Manufacturing companies of the aeronautical industry also turned in a good performance but it was not as sensational as that of the transportation lines.

Most active of this group was Lockheed, which made a fractional gain and is holding near its high for the year. Glenn L. Martin was up 1⅝ and there was good support for National Aviation and Aviation Corporation. Curtiss Wright was heavily traded in and closed unchanged.

Heavy buying in radio made it the day's most active stock and on a fractional advance it made a new high. Bethlehem stood out in the stronger steel group, adding more than a point. Utilities and rails averaged lower for the day, but the declines were fractional in virtually all cases.

Standard of Indiana was a favorite in the oil division and sold at a new 1940 maximum while Dow Chemical, up 2½, featured its division. Most of the tractions edged higher as evidence increased that there would be no strike on New York City's transit lines.

Exchanges Better

Foreign exchanges were better throughout the day. Sterling at one time was at $3.59 and closed at $3.57½, up 1¾ cents. The French franc gained a point. Commercial buying of these currencies was reported in the street.

Among commodities wheat closed off ⅜ to ⅝ cent a bushel on hedge selling by dealers against abnormally large supplies coming on the market. Cotton futures lost 3 to 8 points but recovered a part of early declines.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, April 2.—The stock market revived after a slow start today and final prices showed numerous gains in all groups. Traders took a more favorable view of war prospects but faster action was checked pending Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons later today. The gilt-edged market firmed and industrial leaders were well supported. Kaffirs moved forward vigorously and commodity stocks received selective attention.

Paris.—Lively buying of rentes and other high-priced issues buoyed most groups in the bourse today. The market has become increasingly favorable to the Reynaud government which provided a base for the forward shift. Rentes closed 110 to 170 centimes up.

Amsterdam.—Domestic issues gained as much as 5 per cent in the bourse today with particular strength shown in shipyard and selected commodity stocks. American issues were steady.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures declined 5 to 7 points today. Demand was discouraged by a lower Bombay trend and selling from East Indian accounts, plus hedging, forced prices down.

Washington Gas Revenues Up $198,028

Nonoperating Income Higher in February; 1940 Net $565,454

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed with the Public Utilities Commission today shows operating revenues of $1,104,826 for February this year, compared with $906,798 for February, 1939, an increase of $198,028, as a result of the greater volume of gas sold.

Operating expenses, including taxes, amounted to $723,055 this February, an increase of $136,016 over February last year, due largely to the production and handling of the increased gas sendout. Nonoperating income was $10,812 higher in February this year, amounting to $16,160. Interest charges were approximately the same in February this year as last, being $73,680. The net income from operations in February of this year was $324,251, compared with $251,566 in 1939.

The company's net income for the first two months of 1940 amounted to $565,454, a gain of $100,173 over the same period in 1939.

The report also shows gas sales of 1,712,144 cubic feet in February this year, an increase of 357,808,000 cubic feet, or 26 per cent over February a year ago, principally due to the colder weather this year.

There were 158,896 meters in service on February 29, this year, an increase of 4,223 over the last day of February last year. The company expended approximately $81,000 in February and $162,000 in the first two months of 1940 for extensions to its property to provide for the service requirements of customers.

Commonwealth Edison to Spend $160,000,000

Chicago, April 2 (AP).—Charles Y. Freeman, chairman of Commonwealth Edison Co., told stockholders at their annual meeting today that major projects contemplated for 1940, 1941 and 1942, together with replacements and expansion, involved an outlay of about $100,000,000.

"Sufficient funds," he said, "should be available to meet these expenditures without the need for new financing."

The company's construction program for 1940, involving expenditure of approximately $42,000,000, Freeman said, now was fully under way. Two major projects will provide over 200,000 kilowatts of additional electrical generating capacity at two stations, half of which is to be ready this fall and the remainder in the fall of 1941.

Bankers Offer Indianapolis Light Common

645,980 Outstanding, 68,855 New Shares On Market at $24

An underwriting group including Lehman Brothers, Goldman, Sachs & Co., and The First Boston Corporation is offering today 714,835 shares of Indianapolis Power & Light Co. common stock, now par value, at $24 per share. Of the stock offered, 68,855 shares represent new financing by the company, and 645,980 shares, the total now outstanding, are held by Charles True Adams, as trustee of the estate of Utilities Power & Light Corporation.

Net proceeds from sale of the 68,855 new shares will be used toward reimbursing the company's treasury for capital expenditures, the major items of which include installation of turbo-generators and equipment, boilers and accessories, feed water heaters, pumps, piping, building, plumbing, switching equipment, plant housing and cost of land at the Harding street steam generating plant at Indianapolis. Other major items of capital expenditure already made include the installation of a 50-mile steel tower transmission line loop, wire and accessories, three step-down substations and a steam heating distribution system.

Preferred to be Offered

Prior to or contemporaneously with the sale by the company of 68,855 common shares, the company plans to sell 2,500 shares of its $100 par value, 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock at private sale. Upon completion of the present financing, the company's capitalization will consist of $37,400,000 funded debt; 115,777 shares of 6½ per cent cumulative preferred stock currently outstanding; 24,814 shares of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, of which 22,14 are now outstanding; and 714,835 shares of common stock.

Other members of the offering group include: Glore, Forgan & Co.; Blyth & Co., Inc.; Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc.; Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc.; Hemphill, Noyes & Co.; Kidder, Peabody & Co.; Lazard Freres & Co.; Shields & Co.; White, Weld Co.; A. C. Allyn & Co., Inc.; A. G. Becker & Co., Inc.; Central Republic Co.; Clark, Dodge & Co.; Hornblower & Weeks; Lee Higginson Corporation; F. S. Moseley & Co.; E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc.

For 1939, consolidated net income of Indianapolis Power & Light Co. and its subsidiaries amounted to $2,210,813, compared with $1,941,-965 in 1938, and $1,756,942 in 1937. On the basis of a pro-forma calculation, the 1939 income, after dividend requirements on the preferred stock to be outstanding, would have been equivalent to $1.83 per share on the 714,835 shares of common stock to be outstanding. Actual income for 1937, 1938, and 1939, after dividends on preferred stock outstanding in those years, was equivalent to $1.35, $1.63 and $2.05 per share, respectively, on the 645,980 shares of common stock then outstanding.

Has No Intractly Competition

Provisions for depreciation and expenditures for maintenance for 1937, 1938 and 1939 were equivalent to approximately 20.5 per cent, 20.72 per cent and 19.67 per cent, respectively, of the operating revenue for those years, and approximately 3.80 per cent, 3.63 per cent and 3.37 per cent, respectively, of the book value of property, plant and equipment, exclusive of going value and organization expense.

The company operates in and about Indianapolis, and is engaged principally in the generation, distribution and sale of electric energy. It also produces, distributes and sells steam for heating and general industrial purposes. There are no privately owned electric public utility companies or municipally owned electric light and power plants in competition with the company in Indianapolis.

Utility Stock Issue Approved

An application by the Washington Gas Light Co. for authority to issue and sell 24,000 shares of cumulative convertible preferred stock was approved yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

A group of local underwriters will purchase the 24,000 shares of preferred stock, the company said, for resale to the public—subject to preferential rights of common stockholders—at not less than $103 per share.

"Alias the Deacon" is a story about a card sharp whose clerical appearance won him the alias. It will be on the New York half of the hour-long Columbia program which includes half-an-hour of variety from Hollywood.

The drama, by John B. Hymer and Le Roy Clemens, begins with the "deacon" quitting a "side-door pullman" in which he has been seeing the country in company with several other hoboes. He arrives in a sleepy Midwest country village where he soon spreads havoc in a ladies bridge club.

But before he completes his innocent-eyed visit to the community he has fixed all sorts of situations—even making it possible for the boy and girl of the story to get married.

In the Hollywood half of "Star Theater," Master of Ceremonies Ken Murray, Kenny Baker, Frances Langford, Irene Ryan and David Broekman's Orchestra bring music and more doings of the mythical "Murray Family."

Victor Moore, the vice president who made good, is America's greatest, most stupendous and most colossal comedian, if you'll forgive just a tiny touch of editorial opinion. A week ago last Sunday he was terrific on "Pursuit of Happiness." Tonight he's back again on the WJSV "Star Theater" show at 9 o'clock in the great old-timer, "Alias the Deacon." Helen Twelvetrees and John Beal are in the supporting roles.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

After Archie Goodwin found Carlo Lovchen in Nat Driscoll's office he was faced not only with the problem of getting her past the police downstairs but of persuading her to go to see Wolfe. Inspector Cramer's men wanted her because Rudolph Faber had been murdered in the apartment she shared with Neya Tormic, Wolfe's client, and Percy Ludlow had been murdered at Milton's fencing studio where the two Balkan girls taught. Archie called a friend and had a bellhop come over, wearing his uniform and carrying his own clothes in a package, so that Carla could be garbed in the uniform. Driscoll's secretary went out to buy shoes, and Archie paid the bellhop not to talk.

Chapter 29

CARLA, on the edge of a chair, and the secretary, kneeling on the rug in front of her, were busy getting her shoes changed, while Driscoll, with his lips screwed up and his hands in his pockets, gazed down at the operation. Carla stood up and stamped, and said they were all right. I handed the uniform to her and said go ahead but she would have to take off her clothes or it would look bunchy, and told Driscoll:

"Turn your back."

He blushed rosy. "I . . . I can go in there——"

"I forgot you're modest. Suit yourself. Back-turning will do me."

He went and looked through a window, and I, facing the same way, regarded him suspicously. It was getting dark outdoors and the lights were on in the room, and under those circumstances a windowpane is a fairly good mirror. I admit I may have been doing him an injustice. I spread the wrapping paper out on his desk and, when the secretary handed me Carla's clothes, including coat and hat, made a bundle and got it tied up.

The secretary said, "Look, it's tight around under the arms."

I looked. "Naturally. What would you expect? I think it'll do. Walk to the door and back." Carla walked. I frowned. "The hips are bad. I mean they're good, but you understand me. Put the cap on . . . No, you'll have to stuff the hair under better than that. There by the left ear. That's it. I believe we'll make it. What do you think?"

The secretary said coldly, "I hope so. It's your idea."

Driscoll crabbed, "It's no good. I'd know her across the street."

"Oh," I said sarcastically, "we wouldn't try to fool you. There's hundreds of people going and coming in that lobby and why should they be interested in a bell-boy? Anyway, we'll take a shot at it." I got the parcel under my arm and confronted Carla. "Now. We have nothing to fear on this floor. We'll go down in the same elevator. You'll leave the elevator before me at the main floor. Walk straight to the Lexington avenue entrance and on out, and don't look behind or around. I'll be following you all right. Turn right and keep going on across Forty-third street. Between Forty-third and Forty-second there'll be taxis at the curb. Hop into one and tell the driver to take you to Twenty-seventh street and Tenth avenue——"

The secretary put in an oar: "You'll be with her——"

"I'll be behind her in another taxi. There's a chance that one of those birds in the lobby knows me and will be curious enough to follow me out, in which case I don't want to be seen going for a ride with a bellboy, especially a bellboy with hips. Thirty-seventh street and Tenth avenue. Got that?"

Carla nodded.

"OKAY. Stay there in the taxi till I come. I'll probably be right behind you, but you stay there. If you try a trick, you're done. Every cop in New York is looking for you. Understand?"

"Yes, but I want—I must——"

"What you want is a different matter entirely, like the guy that fell out of the airplane. Will you go to that corner and stay there in the taxi?"

"Yes."

"Right. Good-bye, folks. In ten minutes, not sooner, send the bellboy home. I'll take you on with the epee some day, Driscoll."

He looked as if he was about ready to cry as he shook hands with her. The secretary looked as arctic as ever, but I noticed her voice was a little husky as she wished Carla good luck.

We departed. As she went along the corridor ahead of me on the way to the elevator she looked kind of preposterous, but of course I saw not only what I saw but also what I knew. The other passengers in the elevator gave her a glance or two, but nothing alarming. At the main floor she preceded me out and marched through the lobby, dodging as necessary in the crowd, and it began to look like everything was jake when a call came from my right:

"Hey, Goodwin! Archie!"

It was Sergt. Purley Stebbins coming at me.

The danger was Carla, but for once she acted as if she had some brains. She certainly heard my name called, but she didn't scream or stop and turn around or break into a run. She just kept on going to the entrance. I saw that out of the corner of my eye as I greeted Purley with a hearty grin.

"Well, well, well!"

"It may be," he growled. "What are you doing here?"

I looked around stealthily to guard against eavesdroppers, put my mouth within two inches of his big red ear and whispered into it, "None of your business."

He grunted. "It's quite a coincidence."

"What is?"

"Your being here in this building."

I tapped him on the chest. "Now that's funny."

"What's funny?"

"Your saying it's quite a coincidence. It's funny because that's exactly what I was going to say. Mind if I say it? It's quite a coincidence."

"Shut up."

"Same to you, and many of them. May I ask, what are you doing in this building?" I glanced around. "You and all your playmates."

"Shut up."

"How's the roads?"

"Whatta you got in the bundle?"

"Revolvers, daggers, narcotics, smuggled jewels and a bottle of blood. Want to look at it?"

"Shut up."

I shrugged politely, told him I'd meet him at the corner of Fire and Brimstone, and left him.

THAT WAS okay. But the danger was, with Carla having such a fixed idea about going away from America, that she might be keeping her promise and she might not. Even so, I didn't jump into a taxi at the entrance. I hoofed it to the corner and popped into Bigger's drugstore and stood there. Since it had another exit on Forty-third, anyone Purley sent on my tail would either have to pop in after me or make it to the turn in a hurry where he could see both doors. No one did that. I left by Forty-third, crossed the street and entered Grand Central the back way, did another maneuver in the smoking room to make doubly sure, went out to Madison avenue, jumped into a taxi, and sat on the edge of the seat with my fingers crossed and sweat on my brow until we got to the rendezvous and I saw she was there.

I dismissed my taxi, went to hers and opened the door and beckoned her out, paid the driver and sent him off, and waited until he had rounded the corner out of sight before I steered her down the sidewalk to where I had parked the roadster. She wasn't having anything to say. I told her to climb in and handed her the bundle.

It was only a matter of three minutes across to Ninth, down to Thirty-fourth, and west to the middle of the block. The day was gone and I stopped at a distance from a street light, shut off the engine, and told her:

"There's an assortment of cops in front of Wolfe's house, so we're going in the back way. Follow me and don't say anything after we get inside the house. Just stay behind me."

"I must know . . ." Her voice quavered and she stopped. In a moment she went on. "I must know one thing. Is Neya there?"

"I don't know. She wasn't when I left."

"Where was she?"

"Police headquarters. Not under arrest, they were questioning her and she wasn't answering. They may have brought her to Wolfe's house or they may not. I don't know. Inspector Cramer is there with Wolfe."

"But you said I would only have to see Mr. Wolfe——"

"I said Wolfe wants to talk with you first. Come on."

I got out and went around to her side and opened the door. She had her teeth sunk into her lip. She sat that way a minute, then climbed out and followed me. I let her down the sidewalk to the entrance to the passageway between a warehouse building and a garage, and along a dark passage until we came to the door in the board fence. It was the door Zorka had used after her trip down the fire escape, only from the inside she had only needed to turn the knob of the spring lock, whereas I had to use my key. I guided her across the court and up the steps to the little porch, and used another key, and entered the kitchen ahead of her. No one was in there but Fritz.

$15,000 Raised For Boys' Fund By 2 Groups

Solicitation Unit Has $5,500; Advance Gifts Half Quota

Workers in the solicitation group of the Police Boys' Club campaign yesterday marked up their first notch of $5,596 in the drive to reach their quota of $50,000. Total goal of the campaign is $86,000.

Meanwhile, the advance gifts group has already raised more than half of its $20,000 quota, it was reported at campaign headquarters.

At the solicitation group's first report meeting yesterday after two days of work, Mack L. Langford, campaign chairman, called the results "a healthy start." The group decided yesterday to form a "$100 Club" for individuals who give that amount to the fund for carrying on club activities for another year. The group met at luncheon at the Cosmos Club.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, pointed out that 354 youths, 17 and under, were charged with criminal offenses in the District in 1933. The number dropped to 58 in 1938. In that period the Police Boys' Clubs were founded, and to them Maj. Brown largely attributed the decrease in juvenile crime.

Morris Cafritz, president of the clubs, described the need for them in directing the idle hours of boys in neighborhoods where resources are limited.

The group will hold its next report meeting Friday, with the campaign deadline set for April 15.

Soviet Ambassador Oumansky's Visit Leaves Hull Firm on Embargo

An hour's conference between Soviet Ambassador Constantine A. Oumansky and Secretary Hull failed yesterday to shake Hull's determination to keep the moral embargo against shipment of planes and plane-making materials to Russia.

Oumansky requested the interview with Hull, the first he has had in several months.

At a press conference later the Secretary of State told reporters that the moral embargo was still in effect against any country in the world which incurs its penalties.

Asked specifically whether the cessation of hostilities between Russia and Finland meant an end of the moral embargo, Hull said there was nothing new on that subject.
